After four days' fighting around Beaugency, the French retired to Blois and Tours. Their loss was severe. Many deserters came into our lines here and at Rouen. WILLIAM.

BORDEAUX, Dec. 13.—M. GAMBETTA writes to the Government, under date of the 11th: "I have returned to Tours, having left Gen. Advices from Within Paris to Dec. 10—No Anxiety on the Score of Food—Balloon Sharpshooters Escaping.

LONDON, Dec. 13—Midnight.—Advices from Paris to the 10th are at hand. The Prussians had sent fictitious messages into the city by carrier-pigeons, which they obtained from a captured balloon. There was no anxiety in regard to provisions. Gen. TROCHU had sent out four Prussian officers to be exchanged, with the expectation that they would inform the besiegers of the favorable moral state of the city. The sharpshooters of Belleville had been threatened for desertion when placed in the front.

The population are eager for a fight. On Saturday 10,000 French troops, who were reconnoitering the enemy, captured Ste Uhlans. The Prussians threatening Honfleur have been repelled by the troops from this city, who now occupy Pont l'Evesque.

LUXEMBOURG.

Immediate Occupation by the Germans Threatened as a Military Necessity—Action of the King of Holland—Feeling in Luxembourg—Indignation at Vienna.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—A special dispatch from Brussels to the Telegraph says the Germans will immediately occupy Luxembourg as a military necessity. The correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette at the Hague credits the statement that the King of Holland in November assigned the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg to Prussia. Count von BISMARCK, in a circular to North German Ambassadors, dated Dec. 3, grounds his demand for the neutrality of Luxembourg on the facts that the Grand Duchy had forbidden the transit of unarmed Germans through its territory; and that the revictualing of Thionville, and had omitted to stop French fugitives.

Complimentary Dinner to the Wool Manufacturers' Association by Commission Merchants of New-York—Protection Doctrines Inculcated.

The Wool Manufacturers' Association was feasted last evening in right royal style at Delmonico's, Fourteenth-street and Fifth-avenue, by commission merchants of New-York. The sentiments of those present were strongly opposed to free trade doctrines, and the star of protection was indisputably in the ascendant. Hon. C. E. MUDGE, Boston, presided, and was surrounded by the following gentlemen: John A. Griswold, Horace Greeley, Peter Cooper, Le Grand B. Cannon, John L. Hays, Theodore Pomeroy, H. W. Bellows, Henry C. Carey, Alexander Shaw, Henry Winter, Wiley Edmonds, H. B. Claflin, W. E. Dodge, and Court. F. H. Stoth. Over three hundred others sat down to dinner.

Hon. C. E. MUDGE, President, proposed the first toast of the evening, "The President of the United States," which was received with the most enthusiastic applause.

The second toast was, "American Industry—To foster and develop it is one of the highest duties of American statesmen," to which Hon. HORACE GREELEY responded. The speech comprised the usual arguments in favor of protection. He (Mr. Greeley) said, in the golden age of the Republic doubtless the protection of the industries of the country was one of the first duties of the Government. They have fallen on different days, and find far different ideas enunciated. The speaker, at some length and with great earnestness, argued in favor of protection, contending that the morality of a country and protection to home industry were closely knit together. If this country, he continued, were blotted out of existence, the world could afford to pay billions of dollars for the benefits America has conferred upon it—benefits which never would have been bestowed but for the encouragement given to home industry. He then spoke of the incitements to discovery produced by the high prices given for labor, and concluded by saying that although he loved all countries, he loved Missouri most, and that he did not believe the time would ever come when her home industry would not need protection. [Applause.]

The third toast was "The great iron interest of the country," responded to by Mr. JOHN A. GRISWOLD.

The fourth toast, "The National Association of Wool Manufacturers," to which Mr. JOHN L. HAYS responded.

In proposing the fifth toast, "Protection—the true and only possible way to American free trade," Mr. MUDGE delivered a very lengthened speech, in which he severely criticised the doctrine of free trade, and concluded by expressing his belief that protection would be maintained by the majority of American voters.

The next toast was "The connection between the moral and commercial prosperity of communities," to which Rev. Dr. BELLOWS made a very able and eloquent response, showing how the prosperity and happiness of the country depended on the union of labor, education and religion.

The seventh toast was "The City of New-York," to which PETER COOPER responded, and the eighth toast, "The Congress of the United States," was responded to by WM. E. DODGE. Other toasts followed, and the happy gathering did not separate till after midnight.

Letters expressing sympathy with the object of the Association, and regret for not being able to be present, were received from Vice-President Colfax, Gov. Fenton, E. B. Bigelow, Hon. John Shearman, Gen. Robert C. Schenck, Hon. C. A. Dana, Hon. Lewis E. Morrell, Hon. Roscoe Conkling, Hon. Samuel Hooper, Hon. C. R. Darwell, Hon. Amos A. Lawrence, and H. L. Dawes.

Serenade to Mlle. Aimee at the Fifth-avenue Hotel.

The Parisian cantatrice, Mlle. AIMEE, who arrived here yesterday morning on board the steamship Scotia, received a magnificent serenade at the Fifth-avenue Hotel last night. Shortly after 11 o'clock the band of the Grand Opera-house, under the leadership of CARLO PATTI, appeared on the scene, and began the serenade. In a short time an immense crowd collected. Mlle. AIMEE appeared on the balcony and was enthusiastically cheered, a compliment which she graciously acknowledged. A number of well-known actors and actresses were among those who formed her acquaintance during the serenade.

Served Him Right—A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing.

An exciting and highly-interesting incident occurred in a Broadway stage last evening, which is but a sample of many others of a similar nature that frequently happen, but seldom are pictured in print, partly because the parties concerned shrink from such publicity, and partly because for a lack of prompt and energetic action the culprit escapes. Mr. BENJAMIN HAMMONT, of Philadelphia, while proceeding along Broadway in an omnibus crowded with its dozen passengers, noticed a tall, lank specimen of humanity, of the male species, dressed in a dark suit of a clerical cut, sitting on the opposite seat between two ladies whose dresses partly draped his nether limbs. Once or twice Mr. HAMMONT noticed a strange, timid look and an uneasy change of position by the ladies, and feigning to gaze out of the window, he watched and saw the sober-looking scoundrel moving his feet against another lady, and placing one hand behind the seat. Suddenly one of the ladies turned, and the other arose and said: "This fellow is insulting; he has had his hand on my waist." "Yes, I have been watching the — rascal," exclaimed Mr. HAMMONT, seizing the man by the throat. It was in vain that the wretch pleaded that the ladies were mistaken. He was soundly belabored, and propelled out of the stage handling (with an assortment of gen's) boots changing his flank and rear. One gentleman sprang out and again collared him, insisting that he should be given in charge of a policeman, and the driver proffered his whip to flog him, but the ladies' entreaties not to involve them in a disagreeable Police-court's notoriety effectually prevailed, and the miserable puppy was allowed to escape. This is by no means an unusual offense. It is a common event for ladies to complain of such experience, and there is no reply for them unless they speak out promptly. Any gentleman within hearing will not fail to respond, and punish the rascality on the spot. Women never should be silent under such circumstances.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

Two Men Instantly Killed by a Premature Blast—Several Others Badly Injured.

An appalling accident, by which two men were instantly killed, three others are supposed to be lost, and four others were seriously injured, occurred about 8 o'clock last evening at Seventh-avenue and One Hundred and Forty-fifth-street, by a premature explosion of a blast. A large number of men have been engaged for some time past in cutting through the new Boulevard, at the point stated, where the rocky character of the ground has compelled them to cut their way by means of blasting-powder. They were engaged as usual last evening, the labors of the day being about concluded, as darkness had already set in, and two men were stamping down a charge of powder, in the usual way for the last powder, when suddenly, without the warning of a moment, the charge exploded, throwing huge masses of rock in all directions, the noise that followed was terrible beyond description. A pall of smoke rested for a moment over the spot, from which issued piercing cries of agony, and when it lifted, the extent of the calamity could hardly be discerned in the gathering darkness.

Many of the men who at 7 o'clock had miraculously escaped unhurt and went instantly to the assistance of their prostrate comrades. PATRICK SMITH and RICHARD KNOX were found to be dead. DENNIS FLANNERY, REUBEN PETFORT, JOHN DARCY and PATRICK GOLDEN, were terribly mangled but yet alive, and were borne to houses in the vicinity where they boarded, and were there attended by Police Surgeon ELY, who found their hurts to be serious but not necessarily fatal, and by his direction they were removed to Bellevue Hospital, where they could receive much better attention. The dead men were removed to the Thirty-second Precinct Station-house, where the bodies remain to await an investigation by the Coroner.

A further examination showed that three men, whose names are not known, who were near the blast at the moment of the explosion, were missing, and it is supposed that they are buried under the masses of rock displaced and thrown up by the explosion. It was certain, if this was the case, that they were already dead, and owing to the difficulty of working in the dark and the terror inspired in the laborers by the catastrophe, the search among debris the was postponed until this morning. It is hoped, however, that the men who are missing were not struck by any of the flying missiles, and flying from the terrible spot, like all the others who were uninjured, did not, like them, return.

The explosion naturally created the wildest excitement in the neighborhood, which is somewhat densely populated by laborers employed on the Boulevards and their families. The Police of the Thirty-second Precinct were speedily at the spot, and it required the most strenuous exertions of the extra force to restore tranquillity. Nothing has yet been learned of the immediate cause of the explosion, and all the facts of the disaster can only be ascertained by the inquest to be held upon the victims. The blast is stated to have been a sand blast.

The men had tamped a hole fourteen feet deep, and having nearly filled it with powder, had covered the powder with clay and sand, which was being rammed down in the usual way when the explosion occurred.

The wounded men were visited at an early hour this morning at Bellevue Hospital, where they were found in such a condition that they were able to give an intelligent account of the disaster so far as they knew the facts, but it does not differ in any material point from the narrative already given. They state that the three men who are missing were standing to the others, and they had been with them only a day, which accounts for their names not being known. PETFORT is in a precarious condition, as his spine is injured, but the hurts of the others are not considered dangerous. GOLDEN, however, has lost both eyes and received a wound in the chest. Some men believe that the tamping-iron, happening to come suddenly in contact with the rock, struck fire, and thus ignited the powder.

Doing Business on False Pretenses.

GEO. CAFFA, a young man of respectable appearance, was arrested on Tuesday night by Roundsman BARRETT, of the Tombs Court Squad, by virtue of a warrant issued by Justice HOGAN, on a charge of false pretenses. When the prisoner was arraigned before the Magistrate, yesterday, Mr. OLIVER H. CARTER, of No. 108 Water-street, made an affidavit, stating that on the 12th of September last the accused called upon him, and represented himself as a merchant doing business in Pearl-street, and that he was "making money right along." CAFFA expressed a desire to make extensive purchases of tea from the firm of Mr. CARTER, as he had a ready sale therefor through his father, who was in active business in the South. Believing the representations made by CAFFA, the complainant had consented to sell him goods on reasonable terms of credit, and in fact delivered $6,000 worth of tea to the prisoner on account of the terms of the agreement. While waiting for Mr. CARTER discovered that 1,100 cases of tea had been shipped to Chicago instead of down South, and further investigation resulted in ascertaining that a brother of the accused had received the tea, and sold it on seven, nine and twelve months' credit, at a ruinous sacrifice for cash in order to realize upon the operation. CAFFA's good business in Pearl-street turned out to be a sham, and all of his several representations proved to be entirely false and fraudulent. The Magistrate decided to hold CAFFA for examination, and remanded the prisoner to the Tombs, where he made a desperate effort to secure his release on bail, and probably would have succeeded had not MICHAEL F. POWERS, of No. 113 Water-street, suddenly appeared in Court at that juncture, and offered a new complaint against CAFFA, who, he stated, had obtained $665 worth of teas on the 16th ult. under similar false pretenses, and the prisoner was held on that charge also. There are probably more complaints yet to be offered, as it is understood that the prisoner has been doing an extensive business on his false representations.

Fifty-Third-Street Baptist Church Dedication—Memorial Services Yesterday.

A few years ago a little Baptist congregation in Twenty-second-street, designing to move up town, purchased three lots on Fifty-third-street, near Seventh-avenue, and paid $6,250 for them. They united with another feeble congregation and built a little chapel or basement for the future church at a cost of $13,000. They then set about completing their church edifice, purchasing very cheaply from TIFFANY & Co. the granite composing the old church of the Purification, which stood on Union-square. The sale of the old church building in Twenty-second-street realized $13,000, and the members have, since 1864, subscribed $60,000 to a building fund, with which, and the help of a floating debt of $17,000, and a mortgage of $30,000, they have built a fine church edifice, not costly, but not gorgeously furnished and appointed, at a cost of $95,000. The lots have increased in value since 1864, $21,750. The church is very cheerful and pleasant. The walls and ceilings are white, and the seats and galleries are finished in black-walnut, with red cushions and carpets. Two large reflectors in the ceiling light the centre of the church, while ordinary gas lamps are set round the walls beneath the galleries and at the pulpit, over which rises a beautiful canopy in variegated red and imitation marble. Behind the pulpit, and running the whole length of the platform, an open baptismal font in marble is built, at either side of which are dressing-rooms for male and female subjects. The pulpit rests on a spring, and by an ingenious movement can be lowered to a level with the platform, so that a most unobstructed view of the baptismal service can be had from any part of the house. This is a new and very excellent feature in Baptist churches.

Yesterday the Church and its friends met to hold memorial services preparatory to the dedication of the church edifice, which is to take place on Sunday next. A prayer-meeting of one hour's duration was begun at 2 P. M., and at 3 o'clock devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Drs. HODGE and HUTCHINS and Rev. FRED. EVANS, after which Rev. Dr. HISCOX, who presided, delivered a congratulatory address. Other addresses were also delivered by Rev. MERRILL RICHARDSON, of the New-England Congregational Church; Rev. A. J. F. BEHRENDS, of Yonkers, and Rev. Mr. WILSON, of the Fifty-third-street Presbyterian Church. Mr. RICHARDSON talked about the importance of churches, and of religion or of religious education, to the prosperity of a State or nation. This he said has given New-England her pre-eminence, and Massachusetts alone could today from her wealth give every human being on the face of the earth $1 25. Mr. BEHRENDS spoke chiefly in regard to Church debts. Besides the money debt, which he considered the smallest, the Church owes to mankind a debt of an honest Gospel, a true and right Gospel and a symmetrical Gospel. These points he elaborated and illustrated in detail, and in doing so took occasion to deprecate sham religion and sham Christianity in this truth-loving age, God, he said, had no such mission for his Church on earth as to have one denomination preach baptism, another predestination, and a third apostolic succession. He designed His Church to preach all the doctrines of the Gospel and rear up symmetrical and polished souls for His Kingdom.

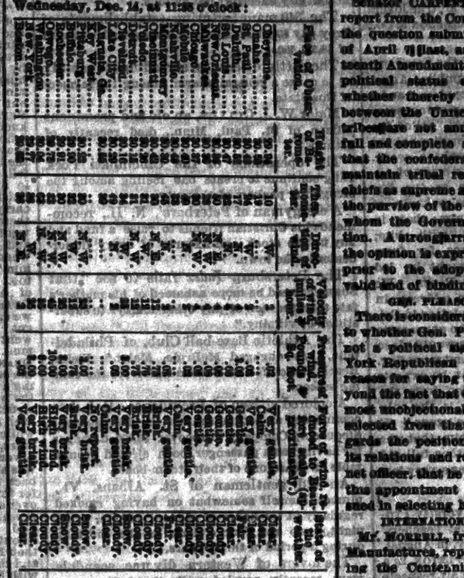
Meteorological Record.

The following is the Signal Service report of the state of the weather and wind last night, Wednesday, Dec. 14, at 11:30 o'clock:



Grand Fair and Festival at the Methodist Episcopal Church, One Hundred and Nineteenth-street, Corner of Second-avenue.

In 1830 a Methodist church was opened at One Hundred and Nineteenth-street, corner of Second-avenue. Four years ago it numbered fifty-seven members, and at present the respected pastor, Rev. W. E. STEELE, can count 400 in his congregation. Few churches of any denomination can boast of such rapid progress within so short a period, and few can point to a pastor so beloved and respected by his flock as Rev. Mr. STEELE. He found the church too small for his rapidly-increasing congregation, and with the aid of his friends he has recently and tastefully enlarged the old building, at a cost of $12,000. The Fair now in progress has been got up by the lady members, for the sole purpose of raising sufficient funds to refurnish the church, and we are glad to say that they appear to have succeeded in their laudable undertaking. The Fair was opened on Tuesday and will continue until Friday evening next. It is worthy of notice in two respects—selling and games of chances are not permitted, and all goods are sold at their real value, most of the articles having been presented by the church members. The Fair is in fact, a modern edition of the system prevailing in all charitable bazaars hitherto held in this City. The lady members wish to raise a certain sum of money, but they like to do so in a bona fide manner, and to give value for it. The Fair has been well attended each evening, the tables are tastefully and fully furnished with a supply of useful and fancy articles, and they are presided over by charming young ladies, anxious to please those who may favor them with a call. To those who are charitably inclined, and to those who are not, we can recommend this bazaar as favorable notice that they will receive full value for their investments.

The department of "valuable relics" will repay a visit. Here will be seen a copy of a Bible printed in London in 1596, a life of Christ published in 1649, several treatises of JACOB BEHME printed in 1661, an original letter written by Rev. JOHN WESLEY, a staff, a willow cane, which grew on the banks of the Jordan; a musical-box of olive-wood, from the Mount of Olives; a piece of a tree which grew in the church-yard of Smyrna, since to the foundation of the church in which the Apostle John preached, and many other articles. The Fair will positively close on Friday evening, and those who are desirous of examining these valuable relics should not lose this opportunity.

A Five Points Incident—Indigent Old Age.

Mr. E. M. SHULTZ, the missionary of the Five Points House of Industry, in his visits to the destitute poor of the Five Points, frequently meets with incidents interesting from their singularity. One of these incidents was called to the attention of the TIMES yesterday. It was that of an Irishwoman, who had reached the remarkable age of one hundred and three years. The family, of which she is the female progenitor, has been in the country but one year, and is under the care of the House of Industry, the authorities of that charity having been, through Mr. SHULTZ, supplying their wants with bread, cocoa, &c., for some time past. The old woman was found by the missionary lying huddled up in a corner on a pallet, in a small and dark-looking room in the miserable and dilapidated tenement at No. 25 Mulberry-street. Though pitiably weak and decrepit, she showed more signs of health and well-preserved faculties than it would be supposed could exist in one so stricken in years. Her son, a lad of fifty-seven, and the youngest of sixteen children, living and dead, and a grand-daughter forty-three years old, were members of the family.

The spectacle of the old woman, once happy in the elasticity and buoyancy of youth, doomed by the extreme age to lie helpless on her pallet, could not fail to excite the deepest commiseration. The old woman was, yesterday, removed to the Almshouse, and her grand-daughter was furnished with employment at the House of Industry. The son is strong enough to earn a livelihood for himself at day's labor. Another poor family, whose story is invested with some interest, living in the same house, has been temporarily relieved by Mr. SHULTZ.

"Why I Want the Vote"—Mrs. Eleanor Kirk's Lecture at Newark Last Evening.

Mrs. AMES ("Eleanor Kirk,") whose literary works have been well known and appreciated for several years past, made her debut as a lecturer, before an intelligent audience, at Library Hall, Newark, last evening. Her theme was woman suffrage, which she treated from the standpoint of the drunkard's wife. In the course of her remarks the benefits which she imagined would result from the establishment of "woman suffrage" were shown not by dry reasoning or reckless assertion, but were presented to the audience through the medium of pathetic anecdotes and striking illustrations. Mrs. AMES' manner of delivery was well adapted to the theme which she was discussing, being at times earnest and impassioned, and governed throughout by a proper regard to the rules of elocution—too often little regarded by occupants of the rostrum. The audience, from the opening of her address to its last syllable, were wrapt in attention, frequently applauding its epigrammatic criticisms of the vices and follies of the married in America.

WASHINGTON.

The Amnesty Bill Before the House—Opposition from Different Quarters—The Fourteenth Amendment and the Indians—Gen. Pleasonton's Appointment—Grand Exhibition in 1876—Assessment of Government Employees.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The question of amnesty now before the House does not give promise of a favorable result. Gen. BUTLER's bill, which was under discussion today, meets with serious opposition on all hands. The Democrats oppose it because it does not go far enough, as they want amnesty to be universal; many Republicans oppose it because it goes too far. Others oppose any amnesty at present, believing that the political condition of the country does not warrant it, and being unwilling to extend it personal, they prefer to postpone it altogether for the present. The opinion among Republican members of Congress is very much divided, as is indicated by the debates in the caucuses last night and to-night. The discussion in the House today on Gen. BUTLER's bill, was confined to his own speech in favor of it, and to those of Messrs. BECK and POTTER against it. Mr. BECK's argument was a very forcible one from a Democratic stand-point, and probably expresses the almost unanimous view of that party on the pending bill.

THE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The first Appropriation bill of the session, the Legislative, Executive and Judicial, was reported by Mr. DAWES today, and made the special order for next Tuesday.

THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT.

Senator CARPENTER today made a very able report from the Committee on the Judiciary, on the question submitted in the Senate resolution of April 6 last, as to the effect of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution upon the political status of the Indian tribes, and whether thereby treaties heretofore existing between the United States and various Indian tribes are not annulled. The report, in a very full and complete argument, takes the ground that the confederated tribes of Indians—who maintain tribal relations and recognize their chiefs as supreme authority—do not come within the purview of the Constitution as persons over whom the Government is exercising jurisdiction. A strong array of precedents is cited, and the opinion is expressed that the treaties made prior to the adoption of the amendment are valid and of binding effect.

GEN. PLEASONTON'S APPOINTMENT.

There is considerable speculation afloat here as to whether Gen. PLEASONTON's nomination has not a political significance or bearing on New-York Republican harmony. There is excellent reason for saying that it has no significance beyond the fact that Gen. PLEASONTON is one of the most unobjectionable men that could have been selected from that State. The President regards the position as so closely resembling, in its relations and responsibilities that of a Cabinet officer, that he adhered to a course in making the appointment similar to that which he pursued in selecting his Cabinet.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF 1876.

Mr. MORRELL, from the House Committee on Manufactures, reported, today the bill for holding the Centennial Industrial Exhibition at Philadelphia, in 1876. He advocated it in a brief speech, as also did Mr. MYERS. Mr. ALLISON opposed the number of Commissioners, as being too great, and Mr. CLEVELAND opposed the idea of any aid from the Government. The bill will probably pass with material amendments.

DISTINGUISHED ARRIVALS.

Among the distinguished arrivals since yesterday are Hon. JAMES F. WILSON, of Iowa, and Senator WARNER, of Alabama, the latter of whom is just up from his Senatorial fight. The attorneys of the Pacific railroad companies are here, waiting eagerly for the opinion of the Attorney-General on the interest question.

SECURING EFFICIENT SEAMEN.

The Senate, succeeded in passing but one bill today, a bill to secure efficient seamen for the naval service, brought forward by Mr. DRAKE.

ASSESSMENT OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES.

Some time was spent in discussing the bill introduced a few days since by the same Senator, which proposes to abstract one-tenth of one per cent. from Government employes' salaries for a general relief fund. Opposition arose from several sources. Mr. WILSON's bill to prevent political assessments was sought to be tacked on as a proviso, and the whole subject was postponed.

PAYMENT OF WAR CLAIMS.

The first bill in order, when the calendar was taken up under the recent rule, was a Relief bill involving the old dispute about what class of war claims should be paid. Without coming to a vote on it, the Senate went into Executive Session, and referred the nominations that have been accumulating to appropriate Committees, and then adjourned.

THE COLORED MEMBER.

Mr. RAINEY, the colored Representative from South Carolina, was on the floor of the Senate a short time today, and was introduced to Mr. SUMNER by Senator SAWYER.

ADJOURNMENT FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

The Senate today concurred in the House resolution fixing the adjournment for the holidays. Congress will therefore take a recess on Thursday, the 22d inst., till Wednesday, Jan. 4.

SHIP-CANAL AT THE MOUTH OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

Senator HARRIS obtained the passage of a resolution today directing the Committee on Commerce to report upon the feasibility of constructing a ship-canal, free to all commerce, connecting New-Orleans with navigable waters of the Gulf. He stated that a canal six miles long would connect the Mississippi with water from twenty to twenty-five feet deep.

MR. FORNEY AND THE CABINET.

Senator CAMERON's withdrawal from the contest for a re-election, sets afloat a new batch of old stories about a Cabinet place for Col. FORNEY. The truth may as well be told in order that the public may know how much credence to place in these reports, which it is the purpose of some of Mr. FORNEY's friends to circulate whenever opportunity offers. These reports serve to keep Mr. FORNEY's name in the foreground in anticipation of any important vacancy that may occur. If a vacancy should occur in the Cabinet, Mr. FORNEY may or may not be called to it, but as for making a place for him, that is quite a different affair.

ACTION OF COMMITTEES.

The Senate Committee on Finance met today, and spent some time in considering coinage and mint bills. No reports were decided on. The Judiciary Committee had under consideration the admission of the Georgia Senators, but came to no conclusion. This matter is lik

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

AN AMERICAN DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. By NOAH WEBSTER, LL. D. Thoroughly revised and greatly enlarged and improved by CHAUNCEY A. GOODRICH, D. D., and NOAH PORTER, D. D. Springfield, Mass.: G. & C. MERRIAM. 1871.

The successive editions of WEBSTER'S Unabridged are as perennial in interest as in value. Each successive reprint finds the work of our great lexicographer still unrivaled among English dictionaries. In each republication we likewise find a mirror of the scientific progress of the age, a sleepless vigilance which nothing escapes, to catch every new shade of verbal significance, and to retain for our unapproached standard of language that freshness which preserves it from ever becoming old. In the 1,840 pages before us there are compressed the results of centuries of culture, and the sum of the intellectual contributions of some of the greatest minds of the race. Whether regarded as a whole, or in detail, the book is equally marvelous. Its illustrations are copious, appropriate and carefully executed. The matter in the appendix is of a character indispensable for reference to all who read and to all who write with serious purpose. The book is, in short, one which neither school nor study, library or office, ought to be without.

ADVENTURES OF A YOUNG NATURALIST. By LUCIEN BIART. Edited and adapted by PARKER GILMORE. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS.

It would be hard to find a book more attractive to a boy than this, or one which imparts more valuable information on all subjects connected with natural history. It describes the adventures of a boy of ten, who accompanies his father, a naturalist, making a collection, a savant, his friend, and an Indian guide, on a journey through the Cordilleras of Mexico. The scenes through which this party travel, and the thrilling incidents which happen to them, their meeting with wild animals, the discovery and examination of a wonderful cave, a hurricane which nearly sweeps them away, a torrent they barely escape being overwhelmed by, and a wild adventure in the woods, are all forcibly and graphically described. The names and habits of the different animals, the varieties and classes of the various trees and plants, and all the natural phenomena of the region traversed, are explained in a simple, clear and pleasing manner. The little hero is forced to endure many hardships, to suffer from hunger and thirst, from fatigue and exposure, but he goes through all courageously, and at last reaches the end of his journey in safety.

The book is profusely illustrated, and this feature will add greatly to its interest in the eyes of young readers.

LIFE AND CORRESPONDENCE OF GEORGE READ, A Signer of the Declaration of Independence, with Notices of Some of His Contemporaries. By his grandson, WILLIAM THOMPSON READ. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO. 1870.

A valuable contribution to the early history of our country, compiled from family papers and original documents, and written in a painstaking and conscientious manner. The citizens of the State of Delaware, to whom the volume is dedicated, will doubtless receive with much interest this tribute to an illustrious citizen, while historical students over the entire Union will welcome it as one more original authority on the events of the Revolutionary War.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE WAR. By ALEXANDER INNES SHAND, Occasional Correspondent of the London Times. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS.

In the excitement of great events such as the present war, and the rapid communication of news by telegraph, principal facts are seized on, but little is known of details. Later when letters arrive with fuller information, newer topics have absorbed our interest and attention, they are left unread, and much valuable information is lost. The writer of these chapters makes up, in a measure, for this loss. He carries us back to the beginning of the war, and calmly and carefully follows the course of those startling events which have hardly yet become familiar to us. He visits the battle-fields of Saarbrück, Spicheren and Forbach, of Wissembourg and Woerth, and describes minutely the country, and graphically the sections that have made these places historical. Following, as he does, the trail of the army, we are naturally shown much of the dark side of war. The villages and towns are filled with wounded and dying, and new-made graves are on all sides. He visits the hospitals at Mayence and Darmstadt, and testifies that the treatment of the French wounded is beyond all praise. His personal experiences with the people are full of interest. He carries away the impression that the inhabitants of Lorraine have no profound objection to German annexation, and bears witness to the kindly feeling that exists between them and the army, but that the Germans believe this is a holy war, for which no sacrifice is too heavy. In a supplementary chapter are descriptions of the principal battles and sieges of the war, taken from German and French sources. The book is illustrated with portraits of the King of Prussia, LOUIS NAPOLEON, and the principal Generals.

BLACK PETER—SCISSOR PICTURES. By PAUL KONEWKA. With Rhymes from the German. HURD & HOUGHTON.

A more charming child's book is not to be found among the gift-books of this season. The artist is most successful with his children's figures. They are simple, naïve and graceful, and full of life and expression. The paper, type and binding all combine to make a beautiful book.

From the same house we have received a copy of The Mystery of Edwin Drood, bound uniformly with the Riverside edition. This fragment ends the long list of the works of the great novelist who is so dear to us all. It will be jealously added to our old favorites, and held in tender regard, as the last words that dropped from the pen of one whose name is a household word in almost every home in this country.

BIBLE NOTES FOR DAILY READERS. A Comment on Holy Scripture. By EZRA A. HUNT, A. M., M. D. 2 vols. New-York: CHARLES SCRIBNER & CO. 1870.

Without professing to contain an exhaustive commentary, these two solid and handsome volumes contain copious explanatory notes on all the books of the Old and New Testaments, designed to assist in the full comprehension and appreciation of the Sacred Record. The notes are concise and to the point, just touching the vital points of each chapter, and carefully avoiding any tedious display of erudition or cumbrous comparison of authorities. The book is well fitted for reception into every Christian household.

THE COMMERCIAL LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES. New-York: Office of the Bankers' Magazine & Statistical Register. 1870.

This volume contains a useful summary of the laws relating to mercantile transactions, to homesteads, the rights of married women, corporations, deeds, &c., &c., as contained in the statute books of the various States. In point of arrangement the book is all that could be desired in a work of reference, and the fact of its being prepared by eminent legal counsel in each of the several States ought to be sufficient guarantee for its accuracy.

PICKETT'S MEN: A FRAGMENT OF WAR HISTORY. By WALTER HARRISON. New-York: D. VAN NOSTRAND.

Southern men are fond of saying that the history of the late struggle has yet to be written. This is a tolerably successful attempt by a Southern military officer to contribute his quota to the unwritten history which posterity may expect to see. Making allowance for the inevitable one-sidedness of such productions, the book is fairly written, and will doubtless be popular in Virginia, if nowhere else.

PHYSICS AND PHYSIOLOGY OF SPIRITUALISM. By WM. A. HAMMOND, amid his active professional duties, occupies intervals very usefully with his pen. He has written a brief work with the foregoing title, which the APPLETONS have just published, and which will be read with interest by all classes of readers. He explains briefly, but satisfactorily, sometimes scientifically and sometimes by the force of reason and common sense, what the credulous and weak-minded accept as spiritual manifestations. In other words it rubs off and wipes out the various popular delusions—delusions specious and mischievous alike—which have been for several years exciting and discussing the public mind.

POEMS FOR CHILDREN. A Book of Verse. Selected by Mrs. ANNA C. LOWELL. Boston: ROBERTS BROTHERS. 1871.

Mrs. LOWELL has brought together a very excellent collection of poems suitable for young people. They are all of favorite writers, and as the volume is small, handy and cheap, it will doubtless find a very large circle of admirers.

Travels of an American Owl, by VIRGINIA W. JOHNSON, (Philadelphia: CLAXTON, REMSEN & HAFFELFINGER,) is somewhat weak satire upon the manners of American travelers of the moneyed vulgar class. The social distinctions of the wealthy are burlesqued by reproducing them in parallel lines of demarcation between the feathered tribes, and some weak fun is thereby extracted out of the absurdities of our native snobs. The traveled owl here delineated visits Europe in his yacht, presents it to a distinguished personage in the shape of a royal falcon, visits the Paris exhibition, assists at the international boat-race, appears at the opening of the Suez Canal, turns up in Rome, &c., &c. The book is beautifully get up, and illustrated by silhouettes only inferior to KONEWKA.

—The American Billiard Record, by MICHAEL PHELAN, (New-York: PHELAN & COLLENDER,) is a compendious statement of all the important matches that have been played in this Union since 1854. As an appendix it contains the rules of the American, or four-ball game of billiards, together with those relating to pool, &c. Among that numerous section of the public interested in the game, this little volume will undoubtedly be popular.

—Our Poetical Favorites, selected by ARABEL C. KENDRICK, is an unusually good collection of secular and sacred poems. They are chosen with the greatest care and skill from the earliest poets down to the latest. Most of our familiar favorites greet us, and we are glad to see that the longer ones have not been excluded. Some few of the pieces we see for the first time, but there is not one in the whole volume without merit. They are arranged with excellent taste, and the whole book is so attractive that it will surely find a warm welcome from all true lovers of poetry. It is published by SHELDON & CO., New-York.

—Citizen TRAINE, member of the Southern League, soldier of the French Republic, American General for the French Republic," and a good deal more besides, has been making some fun in Marseilles. A little journal, called the Revolution, surrenders to his inspirations about a column and a half daily for nearly a week. He is reported to have stated to a circle of admiring auditors that he had come as the LAFAYETTE of France; that he was entirely of the same mind as Gen. CLUBERET; that, in fact, he would stand or fall with him; and that between them it was far from improbable that his audience might be led in triumph across Germany into Berlin. We find our redoubtable countryman address, in the columns of the same journal, a letter to Col. PRICE, our Consul at Marseilles, who appears to have warned him that his vagaries would place him beyond the protection of the American flag. In the missive he announces that he expects very little, in the way of protection, from the Stars and Stripes, since "America is the only nation that does not protect her citizens." It does not appear to have struck him that the hands of the Republic would be rather full did it attempt to keep a supervision over a very few such citizens as himself.

—Dr. HOYT's address on "University Progress," delivered before the National Teachers' Association, at Trenton, New-Jersey, in August, 1869, has been republished by APPLETON, in a somewhat enlarged form. It is in all respects eminently worthy of being put in its present permanent shape.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE

The Philharmonic Society and Its High Prices of Admission.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your late and interesting editorials upon the high prices that still obtain among us have attracted a great deal of attention, and it is to be hoped that you will find time to continue your vigorous denunciation of this the real bane of business. I do not propose now to speak of such things as shoes, hats and other articles of clothing, which are at about the same figures with gold at $1 10½ as they were when it stood at $1 60, but wish to draw attention to the fact that the Society whose name heads this article, so far from seeming desirous to diffuse a knowledge of classical music among cultivated people of moderate means actually drives them from its performances by a scale of prices so extravagantly high that only wealthy people, whether musical or otherwise—mostly otherwise—can attend them. To say nothing of the recent immense advance asked for admissions to their rehearsals,—an advance which shuts out hundreds of modest music teachers, especially lady teachers and their scholars,—I beg you to look at the scale of prices fixed for a "Beethoven festival," announced for Saturday, the 17th inst.: "Tickets, $2; reserved seats, $1 extra." A man with his wife and one daughter, or a brother and two sisters to pay $6 for a couple of hours entertainment of a society which professes to live in the interests of the noble art of music! Is it any wonder that the concerts and rehearsals are fast degenerating into mere exhibitions of over-dressed people, many of whom know so little about music, as to disturb those who do by late arrivals and loud talking? Quite as good concerts as those given by the Philharmonic Society can be heard in London, Brussels or Berlin at one-tenth of the price it asks. I have heard Madam CLARA SCHUMANN play two sonatas at the Crystal Palace to fine audiences of refined people, at one shilling entrance fee, with a seat near the orchestra at only one shilling more; and at St. James' Hall, in London, a room much smaller than our Opera House, the same eminent musician, with equally good soloists, vocal and instrumental, all led by MICHAEL COSTA, was heard at five shillings for the very best seats in the house. At Berlin, I have heard an orchestra of over one hundred skilled performers under the overtures to "William Tell" and "Tarahauser" in a manner which left no room for cavil, at an expense of a few kreutzers.

Is it not possible, Mr. Editor, in this City of one million of people, among whom are so many thousands of cultivated and music-loving Germans, and a larger number of pupils of both private and public schools, to whom music is taught; is it not possible, I ask, to have public renderings of classical music at a price within the reach of the great cultivated middle class?

Depend upon it that, when this is done, there will be less of "Shoo Fly" and the "Duchess," and more of BEETHOVEN, MENDELSSOHN, and SCHUMANN. CROTCHET.

An Impostor.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

On Friday last a young man called at my house and sent to my wife, in an envelope, sealed and addressed to her, a statement that he had been deafened by the noise of the artillery-firing in an engagement in Cuba, and was in most destitute circumstances. This was accompanied by a photograph, a list of amounts given him, and a slip of paper with the following statement: "The bearer of this letter has called at the request of Mrs. ——, of —— avenue," (giving the name and residence of a relative, whose name also appeared on the list of donors.) The same person called on the last-mentioned lady, with a similar slip, purporting to have been written by my wife. Subsequent inquiries have shown that these slips are forteries, and the man is evidently an ingenious impostor. Trust that you will give this matter publicity, that your readers may be warned in time. BOWLES COLGATE.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 14.

Our Frozen Possessions—A Sea Captain's Opinion About Mr. Seward's Purchase—The North-West Passage.

We make the following extracts from a letter recently written to the Titusville Herald by Capt. LEONARD HARTWELL, of New-Bedford, Mass.:

"Having spent the past four years on whaling voyages in the Pacific and Arctic Oceans, I have no hesitation in stating that the Territory of Alaska was, in my opinion, a good bargain for the United States. The climate is not too severe for Americans and not so trying to the constitution as the tropic countries. The soil is adapted to grazing, and the common vegetables are raised in abundance, making it a good recruiting ground for ships. The fur fishery on the coast and islands are very extensive and valuable—St. Paul and St. George especially. San Francisco gets her fish, cod-fish, salmon, &c., there. I know that the very last season there were some twenty-eight vessels engaged in trading between San Francisco and Alaska in furs, such as the Russian sable, fox, mink, otter, &c. The timber of the territory is something like the Oregon pine. The cranberry fields of Kodiac Island, near the peninsula, are immense, and far surpass in size and are equal in flavor to those of Cape Cod or New-Jersey. Gold mines have recently been discovered in Alaska, and California miners have gone there in considerable numbers. The new Oregon Railroad, or North Pacific Railroad, will start the tide of travel, immigration and adventure to Alaska, for Portland is not far from half way between San Francisco and Sitka. I have seen herds of the finest cattle in Kodiac Island, which is some 400 miles north-east of Sitka.

"The fact of the existence of a North-west Passage, in the discovery of which Sir JOHN FRANKLIN lost his life, is established beyond a doubt by the finding of harpoons in the bodies of whales captured on the west side of America, which must have been struck and the animals wounded on the east coast. These harpoons, as you may be aware, are all marked with the name of the whaling vessel to which they belong, and I well recollect seeing one from a whale taken near Point Barrow by the Captain of Ward Cobb, Jos. which bore the inscription of Ward Cobb, the name of a whaling vessel, which struck and lost the whale on the Cumberland Inlet. This North-west Passage, however, is not and never can be of any use or advantage to commerce. I state these facts because I have found the minds of my countrymen false impressions as to the value of Alaska as an investment. Very crude ideas people have of distant countries and latitudes. Even north of Portland, Oregon, as I was told by my companion from San Francisco the other day, no know had been for years, and for years, a face white as hard to reconcile with the idea of the qualities of the climate in what we usually call the frozen North. I have seen in the Summer season at the extreme northern coast of Alaska, bordering on the Arctic Ocean, herds of reindeer, thousands in number, grazing on the plains."

During the religious services at the Louisville, Ky., Jail, on Sunday last, sixty-one prisoners made a bold attempt to escape by removing the bricks from the main wall. The noise attracted the attention of a keeper, and revealed the whole plan.

An unnatural son at Cincinnati, having turned his mother out of doors last week, the poor woman was compelled to seek shelter for the night in one of the tombs at the City Cemetery. She has since sued him for money loaned, and for services rendered.

Considerable excitement was recently created in Howard County, Kansas, by the attempt of Sheriff's officers to arrest a man named STOWELL, for the murder of Sheriff BRASCOM, in 1868. It seems that BRASCOM had given a dinner to rebels in honor of the assassination of President LINCOLN, and that STOWELL, who was a Union man, shot him for his disloyalty.

A contemptible fellow named BLOOD recently absconded from Nashua, N. H., with $200, the price of a house which had been purchased with the savings of an industrious wife. He left a letter behind, stating that he was bound for California, and that she might procure a divorce as soon as she pleased.

Gov. ARNY, of New-Mexico, has brought very many valuable specimens of the product of that Territory to the East. He gives the following as the Indian census of that region: Pueblo (civilized) Indians, men, 2,592; Pueblo women and children, 5,096; total, 7,648. Wild Indians of all tribes, 14,849. Of these the males number 4,576, and the latter are divided among the tribes as follows: Utes, three bands, 441; Apaches, seven bands, 1,337; Navajoes, one band, 2,600.

Ex-Rev. LEWIS LAKE, of Big Indian, Ulster County, whose doings created so much "unpleasantness," a few months since, has recently connected himself with the paper-collar interests of the State in the capacity of traveler. His employer says that he has shown considerable tact in increasing his business, and that he should be quite pleased with him only for his lack of promptitude in settling accounts.

A female child is said to have been recently born at Canaseraga, Allegany County, with an imperfect great toe on the right hip, but without either arms or legs. Dr. D. M. PRATT, who assisted at the birth, vouches for the truth of the statement. He says that the shoulders of the child are perfect, and the head well proportioned. It eats well, is remarkably quiet, and there seems to be a good prospect of its continuing to live.

Those who open letters belonging to friends, under the presumption that they have a right to do so, may do well to take warning by the punishment of JAMES WARNER, a citizen of St. Louis, Mo. JAMES is apparently, was indiscreet enough in May last to open a letter addressed to his sister-in-law, and the latter having discovered the fact, caused his arrest. He was tried a few days ago and sentenced to remain in prison for another month. His curiosity altogether will cost him eight months' confinement.

The Houston (Texas) Telegraph has recently been indulging in the very doubtful amusement of counting its chickens before they are hatched. "The traveler ten years hence," says the Telegraph, "can, at this city, choose from four or five routes to the North, West or East, and several to the Pacific, and can travel from this city, by rail, to any part of the continent. Lands, which are now selling for dimes, will then be worth as many dollars. The whole State will be full of people, of thrift, of enterprise, and prosperity. Places which now have not a house will then be large towns and cities, and Houston will have 50,000 inhabitants."

The reporters of Kentucky have been so long accustomed to dish up murders for the newspapers in sensational style that they now begin to grow careless and tired of the work. An evidence of their falling away may be noticed in the following report of a murder that would thrill New-York with horror if it were to occur here: "On Sunday night, at the Poplar Tavern, near the levee, in this county, five men, named BEN FRANKLIN, JEO. FRANKLIN, WILL JACK ANDERSON, GUS. NEWKIRK and HUSTON BRINNIGAR, went to the house of a Mr. TERRY, and took therefrom his son, BOB TERRY, and took him into the woods and murdered him. The body of young TERRY has been hidden, and all search for it has proved futile. After the killing the men absconded, taking with them four women, VIRA SARTRA FRANKLIN, MARY BRYAN, MARY WHITE and BETSY YOCUM, since which time they have not been heard from. Young TERRY had a check for quite a sum of money on the Exchange Bank of this town, which, it is supposed, the murderers seek."

MEXICO.

Definition of the New "Zona Libre."

From the Brownsville Ranchero, Nov. 26.

Article 53 of the new Mexican Tariff law has been passed by the Congress of the United States of Mexico, by a vote of 66 to 37.

The article, as adopted, reads as follows:

"Foreign goods intended for consumption in the Cities of Matamoras, Camargo, Mier, Guerrero and Monterey—Laredo, in Tamaulipas; Piedras Negras, in Coahuila; Presidio del Norte and Paso del Norte, Chihuahua, shall be exempt from all except the municipal duties."

An additional clause of said article, that "goods deposited in Government warehouses shall likewise be exempt from duties," was defeated.

The debates in Congress seem to have been conducted with much earnestness and fire. The Senate of the opposition contemplated the following:

1. The Zona Libre, as at present existing, is a privilege prohibited by the Constitution and prejudicial to a part of the State of Tamaulipas even, and to the entire State.

2. It is the duty of the Government of the Union that the condition of the inhabitants of our frontier be not inferior to that of their neighbors, and for this reason it should concede them the necessary relief.

3. To obtain this end the Zona Libre is not absolutely indispensable.

4. Even if Congress deem it convenient to approve of the Zona Libre, it should be regulated in such a manner that the interests of the internal commerce of the Republic be not at the mercy of the will of a State Legislature.

5. The extension of the Zona Libre to other States, and especially to those which have no frontier, will carry with it incalculable evils.

The Supposed Suicide Which Turned Out to be a Murder—Mrs. Fenner's Confession.

The Syracuse Journal, of the 12th inst., publishes the following statement of Mrs. FENNER, regarding the death of her husband, who was supposed to have committed suicide by drowning himself in the Erie Canal last Thursday night:

"About 10 o'clock we and 'mine' husband got into a fight, of which we have had many, and while I was hollowing ANTHONY DEAN came running down from the tow-path with the broken shovel in his hand, which he threw down by the door of the shanty. By this time my husband had got me down, and DEAN seized him by the half and dragged and pushed him out doors, and coming in locked the door. FENNER then broke in the door, and DEAN knocked him down and out doors, and following him out, picked up the shovel and struck him on the back, then across the breast, and finally over the head, when he fell, exclaiming, 'Oh, God!' DEAN then came in and whispered to me that he had 'nearly finished him, and that I must go out and help carry him to the canal, for if he was thrown in alone I (he) would know of it.' DEAN then went out and took he rapped on the window, and then came to the door, to which I went, when he said, 'Come, MINA, and take hold of him!' He told me if I did not he would kill me, too. I then went out and took hold of his feet. He only grunted occasionally. DEAN took him by the arms and shoulders, and we carried him to the canal bank. Here his feet got so heavy that I dropped one, and it went to the ground, making the foot-print in the mud. My husband had partially recovered, and DEAN told him he was 'going to throw him in the canal.' He did not struggle, but was groaning a fresh hold of him,' we swung him out into the water.' As he was going, and just before he struck the water, he said, 'Good-bye, MIN,' and then he went out of sight. He came up twice while we stood there, and then we seen him no more. DEAN then told me I did not dare never to tell, he would 'send me after him.' I was afraid of him, and promised. Then we went back to the house, and DEAN made up the story for the children and myself to tell. He told it over several times, and CHARLEY and CAROLINE repeated it after him. He set them in fear, and anything else he would 'murder them.' About 12 o'clock I went into one of my fits, and then DEAN went with ROSA for some matches, and then came back, and DANNY CONNOLLY came with him. They went after the doctor and were gone some fifteen minutes, and then they came back to the shanty. Soon after CONNOLLY went home, and DEAN stayed until 4 o'clock in the morning, when he went home. He came back about 9 o'clock, and repeated the story over and over again for the children and me, and continued to make his threats of murder if we did not tell it."

The woman, or fiend, which ever she is, called on God to witness was the truth.

The little girl CAROLINE was then brought up, and upon her mother telling her to tell everything just as it was, she made a statement corroborating all that took place at the shanty, and as to carrying of the body toward the canal. The boy CHARLES was then brought up, and for some time, despite the commands of his mother, refused to tell anything but the story taught him by DEAN, but finally he owned up the truth, and made a statement corroborating that of his mother and sister.

Subsequently DEAN was brought up, and was told by by Chief DAVIS that the family had all owned up the truth, that "you killed FENNER and threw him into the canal." He was then asked to make a clean breast of it, and own up that 'you and Mrs. FENNER threw him into the canal,' as she says. DEAN remained stubbornly that 'she is a d—d liar.' He then said he would own up, and went on to tell the same story he has told since his arrest.

Death of a Remarkable Horse.

From the Worcester (Mass.) Spy, Dec. 12.

Mr. Z. BAKER, of this city, met with a serious loss, last Friday night, by the death of a valuable horse, which he had just bargained away, and was to deliver on Saturday, had he not got word from his farm in Dudley, on the morning of that day, that the horse had died of colic during the night. This was a horse remarkable for its size, being one of the largest in the country. Its weight, when in good condition, was 2,250, which is enormous, when it is remembered that less than half that is the weight of ordinary horses. He was imported from Scotland a few years ago, since which time he has been exhibited through the New-England States, until last season, when he was purchased and kept at East Brimfield, by Mr. LEWIS M. HOWLETT. Mr. BAKER bought him a few months ago, since which time he has been the wonder of the neighborhood where he was kept. He was a dappled gray stallion, very intelligent, and known as Clydesdale Tom.

Regulating the Lard Trade.

The dealers in lard met, yesterday, at the Produce Exchange, and, after hearing the report of the Committee, and the explanations of Mr. MCCULLOH relating thereto, adopted the following regulations to govern the trade in future: 1. That the standard of "prime" lard, of the rendering of the packing season, qualified for delivery on contract, be of the grade and quality recognized as "prime" for the lard of the packing season of 1869-70; that a committee of five, to be known as the Lard Committee, be elected, whose shall be empowered all questions relative to the quality of lard tendered on contract, any three of said Committee to form a quorum, and their decision that the lard is or is not of the standard quality provided for in section 1 to be final and binding upon all parties; the Lard Committee to have power to appoint competent inspectors to inspect any lard submitted for decision. In case any member of the Lard Committee be an interested party to the reference, he shall not act, but his place shall be temporarily filled by the remaining members of the Committee—the fees for such references to be $15, payable to the party against whom the decision is given. The inspection charges to be paid by the seller on all rejected, and by the buyer on all approved lard. And it was further resolved, that the Committee, who prepared the above regulations be empowered to draw up the necessary stipulations for carrying them into effect.

Additional Testimony Against Brockway, the Noted Counterfeiter—His Probable Discharge.

At the examination before Commissioner OSBORN, yesterday, in the case of WM. A. BROCKWAY, charged with having been implicated in the great counterfeit seven-thirty bond conspiracy, Col. WM. H. WOOD, the chief witness for the prosecution, was recalled for cross-examination. Hon. A. H. FUSHY conducted the cross-examination for the Government. Col. WOOD testified about the expedition to East New-York in company with BROCKWAY, alias William Spencer, alias "Long Bill," for the recovery of the counterfeit five-twenty bond plate. BROCKWAY told him that he would assist him all he knew how in obtaining possession of certain spurious plates for printing Government money. He promised to give him the press from which the fraudulent seven-thirty bonds were printed; the accused also told him his history, from the time he worked in Connecticut, during the hungry-sixty to East New-York. The five-twenty plate was found underneath a stone-pile at the foot of a tree. WOOD told the counsel for the prisoner that he never mentioned BROCKWAY'S name, in his reports to Washington about the seven-thirty plate. He said that he had resorted to things in that case that he hadn't done before, and wouldn't do again.

The case was adjourned until today, at which time the Government will endeavor to prove that BROCKWAY was a fugitive from justice during the last two years. The statute of limitations will be pleaded in his behalf, and it is very likely that he will be discharged.

THE TRACT SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting—Interesting Report of the Labors of the Year—Election of Officers and Directors.

The forty-fourth annual meeting of the New-York City Mission and Tract Society was held at the Bible House yesterday evening, Rev. Dr. DEWITT, President of the Society, in the chair. There was a pretty large attendance of the lay and clerical members, including A. R. Wetmore, Rev. Dr. Hall, Rev. A. Reed, Rev. Geo. J. Minging, Rev. L. Jackson, Morris K. Jesup, L. E. Jackson, David D. Terry, Rev. H. D. Ganse, Rev. Dr. Adams, Rev. Dr. McLeod, Henry Day, James G. Holden and Benjamin Howard, M. D.

The proceedings opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. WM. ADAMS.

Rev. GEO. J. MINGINS, Superintendent of Missions, then made a "statement of the Missions." He said the Missions were never better organized than now, and although they had not so many missionaries as before, they were doing quite as much, and probably more thorough work, and the results were grander and better in accordance with the idea of the Executive Committee. They keep up regularly in their South and tenement-house prayer-meetings, and the ladies have formed the Helping Hand, and every other work to reach people in the city. The preaching services were better and more regularly attended last year, than ever before. Religious services are established among the people, to which they become more and more attached, as well as to the missionaries and their work. Services are held in the Tombs every Sunday morning, and the female missionaries hold missions every Thursday. Lodging-houses are established for deserving cases. Lodging were given to 1,600 men last year; meals are also given, and employment procured. The Temperance Societies, especially for females, are achieving much good. Between 300 and 400 conversions were effected last year, and all those so converted were united to the churches.

The Treasurer, MORRIS K. JESUP, Esq., read his annual statement. From it it appeared that the receipts were $54,171 26, and the disbursements $53,186 26.

Mr. LEWIS E. JACKSON, Corresponding Secretary, read extracts from a historical account of the City Mission, drawn up by the directors. They said that the City Tract Society was organized in 1827, to secure the co-operation of Christians of every denomination in a strong combination for carrying forward more effectively the work of evangelisation; and in 1830-31 the missionary system was encrafted upon the Tract Society. One of the resolutions adopted at the formal organization in 1834, arrested the attention of Mr. JAMES L. SCHIEFFELIN, who offered $5,000 as the commencement of a fund for building Mission chapels, and the City Mission has now three handsome chapels and a good parsonage, in the north, more than 400 members in 1837, the Society was reorganized, under Dr. HOWARD CROSBY, and Rev. Mr. MASONS appointed Superintendent of Missions. During the past five years over $250,000 were raised and expended for support of missionary work, and more than $100,000 was subscribed for the erection of chapels and churches. The report went on to describe the kind of work carried on among the people, mission stations, reading-rooms, temperance unions, lectures, social meetings, &c., and concluded with the following statement of the results of the year:

Missionaries, 1; assistant missionaries, 4; ministerial visits, 114,619; tracts distributed, 1,151,294; voluntary visitors, 311; Bibles given, 462; testaments given, 621; volumes loaned, 5,811; children led to Sabbath-schools, 1,840; children led to day-schools, 358; persons induced to join Bible-classes, 403; persons persuaded to attend churches, and hopeful conversions, 24,247; temperance pledges, 1,451; religious meetings, 4,587; backsliders reclaimed, 123; persons united with churches, 974; 3,593 prayer-meetings, gross attendance, 96,511; 1,159 preaching services, gross attendance, 77,403; 40 open-air services, gross attendance, 10,400; 1,000 sewing-classes for freedmen's girls, gross attendance, 1,500; 2,811 families and 7,000 persons aided, and contributions given, $9,411 24.

Rev. Dr. ADAMS, on rising to move the adoption of the report, observed that he often thought they lost something by not having their annual meeting in some place other than in a private room. But he was aware they were making progress.

Mr. WETMORE replied, as a member of the Executive Committee, that it was very difficult to gather an audience and make a satisfactory impression on the public mind. He was in favor of the motion.

Rev. Dr. MCLEOD supported the motion. He wished success to the organization, and joined in prayer with others that its instrumentality might be largely used in promoting the great objects it is intended to subserve.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Rev. Dr. HALL, in a very eloquent observation, spoke of the consolation derived from work such as the Society's, in carrying light and assistance to those who are ready to perish.

The following gentlemen were then elected by ballot, as directors for the ensuing year: J. Gordon Lathe, Abner Mellen, Robert Ellis and Ameman; 4. William L. Andrews; 5. Benjamin E. Atterbury; 6. Josiah W. Baker; 7. George W. Beale; 8. Nathan Bishop; 9. Riley A. Brick; 10. William A. Caldwell; 11. Charles C. Colgate; 12. John R. Cornell; 14. Elirum A. Crane; 15. Stephen Cutler; 16. Henry Day; 17. William E. Dodge, Jr.; 18. David S. Egleston; 19. Ambrose K. Ely; 20. Zebulon S. Ely; 21. James W. Gillies; 22. Lewis Hallock, M. D.; 23. A. S. Hatch; 24. Robt. G. Hatfield; 25. Jas. C. Holden; 26. Samuel Holmes; 27. Benj. Howard, M. D.; 28. David Irwin; 29. Joseph C. Jackson; 30. Jeremiah Jones; 31. Morris K. Jesup; 32. John Taylor Johnson; 33. Joseph F. Joy; 34. Caleb B. Knevals; 35. Charles Lanier; 36. Joseph B. Leckwood; 37. Benjamin Lord; 38. John R. Ludlow; 39. John R. McLean; 40. Walter T. Miller; 41. John E. Parsons; 42. Howard Potter; 43. A. A. Pond; 44. Archibald Russell; 45. Gamaliel G. Smith; 46. Thomas Storm; 47. David D. Terry; 48. A. R. Wetmore; 49. Horace Winans; 50. Jacob F. Wyckoff.

The meeting then adjourned, after which the directors immediately convened to elect officers and an executive committee for the ensuing year. The following officers were elected: Rev. THOS. DE WITT, D.D., Vice-President; A. R. WETMORE, Treasurer, Morris K. Jesup; Corresponding Secretary and Assistant Treasurer, Lewis E. Jackson; Recording Secretary, David D. Terry; Assistant Recording Secretary, J. Minging; Executive Committee, Rev. James C. Murray, D.D., Rev. John Hall, D.D., Rev. H. D. Ganse, Rev. W. N. McVickar, A. R. Wetmore, Nathan Bishop, John Taylor Johnson, Morris K. Jesup, Wm. E. Dodge, Jr., Archibald Russel, Howard Potter, Stephen S. Hatch, Gamaliel G. Smith, Walter T. Miller, Ambrose K. Ely, George W. Abee, Rev. George J. Minging, Lewis E. Jackson.

Benediction by the Rev. Chairman terminated the proceedings.

Jerry Dunn Convicted of Manslaughter in the Third Degree "With an Extenuating Circumstances."

At the opening of the Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday, Judge CARDOZO presiding, the jury in the case of JERRY DUNN, tried for the murder of "LOGAN No. 3," came into Court and announced that they had agreed upon their verdict. The fact that the jury had deliberated all night has evidently had its effect upon the prisoner, who appeared nervous and uncertain as to the result.

Mr. VANDERVOORT, the Clerk, said: Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon your verdict?

FOREMAN—We have.

Mr. VANDERVOORT—Jurors look upon the prisoner. Prisoner look upon the jurors. Look at you, prisoner, do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty as indicted?

FOREMAN—We, the jury, do find as our verdict that the prisoner is guilty of manslaughter in the third degree, and we also find that there are no extenuating circumstances.

Counsel for the prisoner asked that the jury be polled. This being done, each juror answered that the verdict, as rendered, was his.

District-Attorney GARVIN moved for sentence. Counsel for the prisoner opposed immediate sentence, and asked for a reasonable delay in order to present a motion to the Court in arrest or judgment.

District-Attorney GARVIN opposed a delay, and suggested that the motion might be made after sentence.

Counsel for the prisoner claimed that the motion must be made before sentence, in order to be regarded as relevant. He said that a innocent man had suffered two years' imprisonment without remedy, because of the mistake of having a motion in arrest of judgment made after sentence instead of before.

Judge CARDOZO said, that in view of the special finding of the jury that there were no mitigating circumstances, he did not feel at liberty to favorably entertain a motion for delay, but as he believed the administration of justice was always more respected when a fair opportunity was given to present whatever might be proper to present on behalf of the prisoner, he would postpone sentence until 10 o'clock this morning.

Sentence was postponed accordingly.

Kings County Water Board—New Project for Raising Money.

About a week ago, it will be remembered, the President of the Kings County Water Board, WILLIAM A. FOWLER, sent in a communication to that body, stating that the accounts of the Department for the past year showed a deficiency of $113,000, and added that the prospect for the forthcoming twelve months was, that unless some special measures were taken to meet the emergency, an exhibit of a still more humiliating character would have to be made at the end of that time. Several schemes, couched in general terms, were also embodied in the document, all of which were referred to a special committee, who at a meeting of the Board, made a report yesterday morning. They say they have made a thorough investigation into the annual resources and expenditures of the Department, and find that the interest upon the bonded debt, and the necessary supplies and repairs, exceed the revenue by $[illegible] 46. The Committee see no way to lessen this deficiency for the coming year if the present rates are maintained, but on the contrary, are of opinion that it will and must be increased. The Committee are of the opinion that the privileges now, and which for many years past, have been accorded to the consumer, should be disturbed as little as possible, and as the annexed schedule of rates on dwellings will yield sufficient revenue to meet the interest on the bonds issued and the current expenses of the Department, together with the interest on the bonds to be issued for the proposed storage reservoir, when the changes contemplated are made they would recommend no other alteration of rates at this time, and we believe that the consumer will readily assent to this, and will cheerfully contribute

HOLIDAY TRADE.

Novelties in Dry Goods and Fancy Goods.

LIVELY SCENES IN BROADWAY.

Unexampled Briskness in Business.

The Ladies' Resource—How They Are Crowded—Staple Fancy and Miscellaneous Articles—Anticipations of a Happy Time.

The holiday fever is setting in rapidly. Our emotional people already manifest intense symptoms of the approaching carnival jollity. Already the shops of Broadway blaze with accustomary splendors of the Merry Christmas time, and visions of gay St. Nicholas and the Happy New-Year are brilliantly set forth from rich bazaars, crowded with the wealth of every land, and arrayed in such most tempting shape as befits the happy season of which it gives suggestion. The harlequin hues of shop and street, the bright faces, the crowds, the smiling shopmen, and the prattling of childish voices, all tell that there is something more than ordinary every-day shopping going on in our grand thoroughfare. There is never lack of appreciation of what is rich or rare or beautiful in New-York. It is perpetual holiday in the Metropolis in this respect. The richest, the rarest, the costliest in goods or jewels that money can procure are ever kept before the gated sight of your Metropolitan to the manner born and in the manor residing, so that it would seem impossible to startle him with anything new, to add a superlative to the comparative of excellence already attained and held to with such regularity and such extravagance of beauty. It would seem that here, where in the eyes of wondering rustics it is always a grand festival, there could be no difference made to mark the coming of the Christmas time. But there is that in the reminiscence of the season that changes the sentiments of men, a something that thaws out hearts, which, like their owners' strong boxes, resist all the efforts of charity or burglars—a something that makes one merrier, happier, freer with his money, whether rich or poor, that cannot be resisted. And this it is that makes a glorious change which may be noticed now in Broadway, its people and its decorations.

It is not that the diamonds in the jewelers' windows sparkle with a more dazzling brightness, nor that the merchants' stock glows in more glorious hues. It is not for any of these reasons that business takes a fresh start and with redoubled vigor urges along, doubling and trebling the shopman's profits, until he who has begun by frowns, finds himself tempted into a smile which grows into a broad grin that lasts invariably until the new year has begun. Oh, no; there is magic or nothing in it. The spirit of harlequin is abroad at such a time, waving his sword of lath and performing most fantastic tricks, most amusing tricks of mystification. Broadway is bewitched, the fairies have it in their charge, and nursery visions of golden realms, unreal delights and pleasures of enchanted lands revive, while that same harlequin of whom we have spoken waves over all the enchanted dreamers that same potent sword of lath. And what a transformation do we find. Old men return to youth—the bald, the blind, the deaf, invigorate with potent memories of the past, come out rejuvenate to live a brief existence as they were. This is the holiday time, and these are the effects of its mystic influences. These are the causes that make the ordinary sights and scenes of the great artery of the Metropolis take fresh vigor, new beauties hitherto unknown. This is why our merchants range themselves in line along the gay promenade with more than usual glory of bright colors and rich combinations in their goods. And foremost among them in the richness of their display and the amount of their holiday business, are the advertisers in the TIMES. Let us walk among the gay crowds who anticipate the holidays in their sentiments and purchases, and review as we go the glories of the carnival show, and the novelties of our palaces of trade. The show is indeed tempting, and the avidity with which the "shoppers" rush into the temptation is the greatest of all the wonders of the coming period of extravagance. We propose to review the show in the way it may, not hoping to embrace all in a single glance, nor to describe, even with a faint realization of the sights and events and richness of our great retail marts, the extent of the holiday trade, in a single article.

STEWART'S.

STEWART'S, of course, is a favorite resort for holiday trade, for such a grand and rich variety to select from, that even in times like these it frequently attracts more importunate customers within its spacious precincts than scores of clerks can attend to. Since the holiday trade set in in earnest, several days have passed, there have been twenty cashiers and over 300 clerks kept hard at work from morning until after nightfall. In the legitimate holiday goods, articles of bijouterie, fancy goods, and little trifles suitable for presents to dear ones, there is a great variety. We noticed a number of unique novelties, jewel and glove boxes, traveling sacks, &c., of unique design and elegant finish, at every gradation of price, and the greatest demand of the time is for silks. This department has been so pressed with business that, besides the department in the rotunda, it has been found necessary to open another on the first story, seventh side of the building. This latter subdivision is devoted to the sale of cheap silks, and here an immense business is being done, owing to the great bargains to be obtained in rich material. The prices here are as cheap for silks as those of last year, the stock consisting of a quantity of goods purchased at low figures in Lyons before the city had been threatened by the advancing Prussians.

But the richest show of goods in our opinion is made in the lace department, where a dozen clerks are hopefully attending the wants of the wealthier class of customers. We were shown in this department a magnificent specimen of point de gaze lace flounce, a quarter of a yard in width, of most exquisite intricacy and fineness, at $260 per yard, seven yards being required for a dress, with garniture to match, at $20 per yard, or for the whole, $1,820. This was quoted at $1,200, and the handkerchief form, $3,300 for the complete lace outfit. A small ruffled cape of the same, of superb pattern and workmanship, was held at $240. A very superior sample of applique flouncing was $60 per yard, with shawl to match at $900. A complete trousseau of the finest point d'applique may be had for from $450 upward. A shawl of Chantilly lace, worked in the form of trailing vines and flowers, cost $1,800; flouncing to match, $100 per yard, and parasol cover of the same, $250—an exquisite pattern. The Duchesse, an old style of lace revived, has just been received, and meets with much favor here. Its price ranges from $30 to $60 per yard. Some fine specimens of Chantilly edging at $8 per yard were also shown. Handkerchiefs of Duchesse lace bring from $20 to $60, and are going off very rapidly. Some splendid ideas in lace fans also find expression in the richest imaginable forms. A black Chantilly lace, $20, and a Duchesse, at $40, were most remarkable. A great trade is also being done in the department of India shawls. We were shown some exquisite patterns at $200, $400 and $6,000. In all departments of this immense house, however, there is noticed an immense impetus to trade consequent on the approach of the holidays, and purchasers were never, according to all accounts, more eager to part with their money.

KIZLETT'S.

At KIZLETT'S, No. 621 Broadway, a similar scene to the above is being enacted daily. An immense stock of holiday goods has been laid in, and the entire second floor of the building has been devoted to this special branch of the trade. Toys of every variety and novelty of shape and attractiveness, richly embroidered needlework sets, lace handkerchiefs and shawls, fancy jewelry and novelties in necklaces and chains are most prominent among the new articles. The stock thus offered for the especial trade of the holidays, is valued at $100,000. Prices range from the very lowest to the extreme of extravagance, and the grand establishment is closely packed with customers all day long. Trade in laces, toys and scarf-ribbons has shown thus far the most briskness in the move, though there is no dullness in any department now that the holidays are drawing near.

LORD & TAYLOR'S.

The new store of this famous firm, at the corner of Broadway and Twentieth-street, is peculiarly fitted for the necessary extreme of display for the enlivening trade. The stock laid in is enormous in quantity, and unsurpassed in quality. In the matter of laces and cloakings and velvets it is especially grand, and the trade in silks is here quite as remarkable as at STEWART'S, the clerks being hardly numerous in number to fill all the demands made on them. Some unique designs in dressing-cases and glove-boxes attracted our attention, and a display of richness in tapestries of the loom and mine bewildered, and made vain all efforts to realize their richness in sober prose. The show of Chantilly laces at this house is superb, and the richer variety of shawls and dress goods are offered in abundance at low prices that are calculated to encourage a lively holiday trade.

MCCREERY'S.

At MCCREERY'S, corner of Broadway and Eleventh-street, the specialty is silks of new hues and rare combinations of color. There is an abundant stock of the richer goods, and a plentiful show of trifles and objets gifts, though the dry goods specialty represses any great tendency to a display in what are comedies and legitimate holiday scenes. The stock offered is exceedingly fine and well selected, evidently being chosen with the express view of catering to holiday purchasers. Trade in this establishment is, as in the former cases reported, fairly overwhelming, and the rush being so great as to occupy the time from morning till night of every one of the large force of employes of the firm.

MACY'S.

MACY'S, in Fourteenth-street, is always a great centre of the legitimate holiday trade. It always has the most bewildering show of toys, and trifles of greater cost but equal attractiveness and utility. The show of this season, however, exceeds anything that has gone before. Truly there never was a more splendid display than that to be witnessed there now. Where there is the usual extensive show of laces, fancy goods, ribbons and all the trifles that charm the experienced "shopper's" taste, it is in the toy and objets departments that MACY comes out strongest. Among other things we noticed a variety of dressing-cases, ranging in price at from $25 to $60, according to their finish, and our attention was called to many surprising devices in the way of slow-fires; these answered the double purpose of cigar-stands, and slippers that might be used as watch-pockets. The variety of the stock really beggars all description, and the crowd of purchasers who jostle and push for precedence in making their purchases, is wonderful. It would drive a political economist crazy to view such a scene.

Hard times these, indeed! Go to STEWART'S, to KIZLETT'S, to LORD & TAYLOR'S, to MCCREERY'S, to MACY'S, and then say if this richness of display, this Eastern magnificence, this profusion of wealth, and this lavish dispensing of money, is any sign of poverty and suffering. Say, rather, is it not a sign of happy days to come, and the merriest Merry Christmas on all the long succession of happy days within your memory? The holiday trade, with thermometrical accuracy, shows the temper of our people, even in the matter of the strings of our pockets. The national barometer is at "set fair," and the thermometer indicates Summer heat.

SUDDEN & BRADBURY.

SUDDEN & BRADBURY, of Nos. 512 and 514 Bowery, have a limitless variety of every article that can conduce to the comfort and luxury or appeal to the vanity of the female mind. To enumerate them all would be almost impossible, and reference can, therefore, only be made to some specialties, an omission of attention. Their stock of dress goods is unusually large, and embraces everything new in this most important line. Their entire stock has been replenished with peculiar reference to holiday trade, and it is safe to say that there is nothing in the market worthy of attention that has escaped the eye of their buyers. Their fancy goods department is overflowing with articles peculiarly suitable for Christmas and New-Year's gifts—such as fancy French initial handkerchief and glove-boxes, Roman scarfs and ties, and innumerable little outfitting necessaries in that way. They have on hand an immense stock of MONOD'S French kid gloves, and an endless variety of ladies' skirts and white goods, satine clothes and other fabrics for suits.

W. E. PETTON, NOS. 272 AND 274 BOWERY.

At this establishment can also be found a splendid assortment of ladies' dress goods, in the piece and made up. The suits are all in the latest styles, and trimmed in exquisite taste. Among them may be mentioned an extensive variety of Swiss and Tarletan evening robes, serges in all colors, black and colored velveteens, plaid poplin, and endless varieties, especially selected for holiday trade. This firm has laid on hand an immense stock of waterproof cloaks, in all styles, Paisley shawls, &c.

G. RICHMOND & CO., NO. 788 BROADWAY.

This is peculiarly a ladies' warehouse, and being for over twenty-five years established in the trade, needs only mere mention. There is no article in its peculiar line of trade that cannot be found here. Ladies' dress caps, headdresses and embroideries are scattered about in holiday profusion. Valenciennes lace caps and chemisettes, gloves, handkerchiefs, Roman scarfs, sashes and other innumerable articles of feminine adornment are among its attractions.

O'SULLIVAN & GREIG, NO. 711 BROADWAY.

At this establishment the Winter comforts of the little ones can be fully supplied. Here can be found children's fur sets in every style, and at all shades of prices. WILLIAM JACKSON, NO. 769 BROADWAY.

In the midst of life, even holiday life, we are in death, and for this seemingly severe Providence we make mention. Mr. JACKSON provided suitable raiment. His establishment is devoted to the mourning business, and in it can be found every article proper to an outward signification of grief, Henrietta cloths, for deep mourning, bombasine, silk velours, all wool poplins, velveteens, deep black and green grain silks, of all of which there is an immense variety. There is also to be found here a large stock of Astrakhan and beaver cloakings, and materials for making suits in every variety; crape veils, kid gloves, and, in short, very requisite for a complete mourning outfit.

THOMAS TWEED & CO.

This store, at No. 765 Broadway, is well stocked with a variety of goods suitable for holiday presents, among which may be mentioned, cottons from 50 cents to $1 per yard; ottoman velours, Irregular and Empress cloths, at equally low figures; mixed goods and plaids; velveteens from 87½ cents to $2 50 per yard, and common goods, which have been purchased expressly for the holiday trade. All goods here are marked down to the lowest figures, and purchasers can scarcely fail of being satisfied with the bargains.

A. W. TAYLOR.

This gentleman has recently opened the stores No. 55 Lispenard-street and No. 806 Canal-street, for the purpose of retailing at wholesale prices a large lot of fancy dry goods and notions. His stock consists of a fine assortment in variety, a general line of fancy goods, writing-desks and work-boxes, dolls, gloves, hosiery, &c. He is considerably under the Broadway stores as regards prices, and his stock is not inferior to any of the larger establishments.

BENNETT, WILLIAMS.

This gentleman, as our readers are well aware, has the oldest established lace-store in the City. It is located at No. 478 Broadway, and is crowded from morning till night with ladies in search of bargains, and at this particular season they do not have to look far before they are suited. Mr. WILLIAMS has probably the best assortment of real laces to be found in the City. Here can be found handkerchiefs delicate enough to absorb the dew drops of a fairy's breath, which are only $50 each, and some very handsome articles can be obtained for even $3. Lace collars from seventy-five cents to $75, and in this category may be mentioned some thread-lace collars which are worth $1 50, but which Mr. WILLIAMS finds it profitable to dispose of for from 50 to 75 cents each, and there is just now a great demand for them, ladies coming from long distances in order to secure such bargains. Point laces, by the yard, which could not have been sold before the war for less than $10, are now retailed for $5. Lace capes of thread, valenciennes and guipure, from $8 to $60. Very choice Llama lace shawls and sacks for $10 and upward. Purchasers cannot go amiss if they will give Mr. WILLIAMS a call, and whatever their tastes, will find everything to suit them. His customs his well-earned reputation of keeping the finest gloves in the market, and selling an article for sale that would elsewhere command $1 50, for $1 25. He will import a new invoice for the Spring trade, which he can afford to sell at the same price, but at present ladies cannot fail to be suited with the stock now on hand. There is also a choice stock of illusion goods made up into sleeves, chemisettes, &c. Also black thread and guipure laces by the yard, as well as duchess laces, all of the most exquisite patterns. These goods are all imported direct from Paris, were purchased at a time when money was more valuable to the Parisians than their stock, and Mr. WILLIAMS is giving his patrons the benefit of his foresight and judicious cutting.

RICHARD MEADES.

At the corner of Sixth-avenue and Nineteenth-street will be found a large and pleasantly arranged store devoted to the business of silks, laces, hosiery and house-keeping goods. Everything in this store is sold at the cheapest possible rates, and it is the aim of Mr. MEADES to keep none but reliable articles. For holiday goods he has an excellent assortment of Vienna leather porte-monnaies, satchels, glove and handkerchief boxes, bonnet and cloaking velvets and velveteens, ladies' sashes, bows and ties, hand-made assorted goods, pockets, shawls and waists, ladies' under-clothing, in every variety, gloves, hosiery, ready-made suits in serges, alpacas and velveteens, skirts, and in deed everything that is wanted in a family of large or small proportions. In the way of house-keeping goods there are lace and other curtains, sheets, quilts, blankets, &c. In fact this store is crammed with goods and usually filled with customers from morning till night, who find that they can do much better on Sixth-avenue than they can in other parts of the City.

E. RIDLEY & SON.

One of the largest stores on the east side of the City, devoted to variety goods and notions, is that at the corner of Grand and Allen streets, kept for the past nineteen years by EDWARD RIDLEY and his sons. This is emphatically the Grand-street cheap store, and here can be found everything that is useful, and a large quantity of the ornamental. Here are lace handkerchiefs from fifty cents to $40, and fine embroidery from fifteen cents to fifty cents, collars and sets consisting of sleeves, cuffs and collars at very low rates, albums, worsted goods in every variety, embracing afghans, ladies' jackets, children's hoods, &c.; an almost endless assortment of dolls, from the one-baby to the elegantly-dressed wax infant; imported hats of felt in the Montaland and other styles, trimmed and untrimmed; boys' and girls' hats; Scotch caps, imported by Mr. RIDLEY; children's toys, boxes of perfumery, writing-desks, glove-boxes, gentlemen's dress handkerchiefs, suspenders, &c. Indeed, there is scarcely anything missing in this store from a penny trumpet to the most delicate embroidered goods. Residents of the east side of the City thoroughly appreciate the enterprise of the Messrs. RIDLEY, and are liberal in their patronage.

MILLER & GRANT.

These gentlemen are importers of real lace and embroideries, ribbons, dress trimmings, &c., at No. 478 Broadway. They have some very fine specimens of lace, in the form of collars, &c., handkerchiefs and other articles, point laces in every style and of the most costly character; also laces by the yard. These gentlemen make a specialty of ribbons. Embroidery in every variety of color; also fringes for dress trimmings, French fancy goods, and bows for the hair and neck.

BOOSE, No. 448 Broadway, makes a specialty of furs for ladies and gentlemen's wear, and offers them at very low rates. He recently patented "Le Gant Mus" in all the style just now. KNOX, the hatter, of No. 212 Broadway, is as poetical as ever, and his goods sustain their well-merited reputation of being among the best in the City. Mme. NATALIE TRIMAN & Co. of No. 84 East Ninth-street, has an elegant assortment of bonnets and every species of millinery, including bridal wreaths and veils, ready-made or to order. And last but by no means least, Mme. GAYNOR, of No. 224 Fulton-street, is ready to supply the ladies with corsets of the latest style, skirts and tournours of the latest style, and all the late novelties, including the bridal and duchess trains and the panier imperatrice skirt.

NEW JEWISH TEMPLE.

Laying the Corner-Stone—Interesting Ceremonies—English and German Orations.

The ceremony of laying the corner-stone of the Jewish Temple, "Ahawath Chesed," on the corner of Lexington-avenue and Fifty-fifth-street, a full description of which has been published in the TIMES, took place yesterday in presence of a goodly host of the children of Israel. The large platform laid over the ground, and to a seat on which admission could only be had by the presentation of tickets issued to prevent crowding, was thronged, not only with persons of the Jewish faith, but many Christians, among whom were conspicuous Judge Cardozo and other members of the Municipal Government. There were seated on the rostrum raised as one end of this platform the Jewish Rabbi, Trustees of the congregation, the Building Committee, Messrs. Ignatz Stern, R. Wyman, M. Kahnert, A. Kind, D. Bernard, and the architect, Mr. Renard. The ceremonies were begun at 10½ o'clock by IGNATZ STERN, who read a short history of the congregation. He remarked that just twenty-three years ago a few Israelites came to this country from Bohemia and united in Washington-square, and commenced to pray for worship at No. 69 Ludlow-street. In 1848 their numbers were increased by the advent of exile brethren driven from Europe by the revolution. Then it was that a committee of seven was appointed to report upon a plan of constitution for the Jewish congregation. At that date there was but $22 20½ in the treasury. On the 21st of December, in the same year, the constitution of the "Ahawath Chesed" was adopted, and signed by thirty-one members. The difficulties and troubles passed through by it until the establishment of their synagogue, at No. 27 Crosby-street, April 24, 1854, where they worshiped for ten years, were pathetically portrayed by the reader. In 1864, the church at the corner of avenue C and Fourth-street was opened, and since that event the Lord had blessed the children of Israel. He concluded this story with an account of the free and bountiful subscriptions made by the members toward the advancement of their religious enterprises, stating that $70,000 had been given since last month—when the list was opened for donations to defray the expense of erecting this edifice—of which sum there is $6,000. He returned thanks to the donors and all, male and female, who had labored in its behalf.

The choir, assisted by a large orchestra, sang beautifully the Psalm 118, v. 22-26, under the direction of Prof. Kappel. The Hebrew Prayer by Rev. Dr. A. HUNEKER, the pastor, followed, and Mr. STERN deposited in the box to be laid in the centre of the corner-stone coin of the time, the Constitution of the United States, the constitution and history of the congregation, the names of the officers of the congregation, the roll of membership, copies of the daily and weekly papers and the programme of the day's ceremonies. A silver trowel was presented by the Chairman of the Building Committee, Mr. R. WYMAN, to Rev. A. HUNEKER, who replied suitably, and proceeded to lay the stone. The corner-stone was deposited in its resting-place, the mortar laid and smoothened by him, and the upper stone was lowered to its place, while the choir burst forth in joyous notes of praise composed for the occasion by Rev. B. WELSCH. This part of the ceremony over, Rev. Dr. ISAAC M. WISE, of Cincinnati, delivered the oration, saying:

BRETHREN: Let me begin my address to this numerous assembly with thanksgiving and adoration to the Eternal One, the infinite, the absolute deity, who has deigned to reveal himself to the children of Israel. Let me also return thanks also to the rabbi and the officers of this congregation, that I am permitted on this occasion to render glory to the Most High, and to expound Israel's sacred cause in the midst of this worshiping multitude. You lay the corner-stone to a new temple, in this Metropolis of our country, and you do not build another structure beside all the gorgeous temples in this City and country; to add another link to the blessed chain of sanctuaries which encircle all climes and zones, all authentic history, from the first altar erected by the Patriarch Abraham in yonder Peninsula, to the temples of the modern Israel of the globe; to invite the sons and daughters of your congregation, of all the families of man to come and worship the sole Sovereign of the universe, and to listen to the spirit of truth which He poured out, and continually pours pour out, over Israel, as the Prophet Isaiah announced, and as Jesus, Israel's brother, said. He claimed that the people of Israel had always been in advance of the world; spoke of their dispersion as inevitable, for God had dispersed all nations the more effectually to unite the people of the earth. But, said he, the Hebrew never has been lost; they have been consecrated, not annihilated. In conclusion, he stated that when freedom reigned, Israel arose in every branch the leader of the world.

Dr. HUNEKEN next addressed the assembly in German, and the ceremonies terminated with a grand anthem of praise by the choir.

Department of Public Parks.

A communication was received from RICHARD B. COMSTOCK, City Controller, calling upon the Department for statements in detail of the amounts required to be provided for in the annual appropriations by the Common Council for the next fiscal year; whereupon the Treasurer submitted estimates, and a resolution was adopted approving them, and directing the President and Treasurer to transmit them to the Controller.

A report was received from the Auditing Committee on bills examined and recommended for payment, which was approved and the Treasurer directed to pay the same.

An Important Question Before the Surrogate—The Right to Administrate Upon an Estate Opposed.

The following case was brought before the Surrogate, Hon. H. C. HOTCHKISS, yesterday. It presents several interesting questions. ROBERT S. CUMMOR, a Scotch merchant, residing and carrying on business in this City, died here in October last, intestate, aged fifty-one years. As he left no relatives residing in this country, his property, consisting of a valuable stock of goods and a large bank account, amounting to about $60,000, was taken possession of by the Public Administrator, who thereupon gave public notice of an application to the Surrogate for letters of administration, returnable on the 12th inst. Upon an examination of the business books of the deceased, he was found to have a partner in Scotland, to whom the assets of the estate were given up by the Public Administrator. The law requires that in cases of this kind the surviving partner of a firm shall immediately close up the business. On the 10th day of the present month, two days before the notice above referred to was returnable, a party claiming to be a sister of the deceased appeared, and, upon an affidavit that she was a resident of the State of New-York, letters of administration were on that day issued to her. The action yesterday was brought by the Public Administrator to contest the right of the administratrix to the said letters, and the opposition is made on the following grounds: First, that the letters of administration are irregularly issued. Second, that the administratrix named in them is not a sister of the deceased. Third, that if so, she is not a resident of this country within the spirit and meaning of the law. Fourth, that an alien non-resident cannot take out letters of administration; and fifth, that it would be contrary to the interest of the estate to have the said administratrix act as such. After some discussion as to the questions involved, the administratrix was placed upon the witness-stand, and testified as to the facts set forth in her petition for letters on her alleged brother's estate. The direct testimony was all that was taken, when the case was adjourned until today. In the proceedings taken Messrs. MARTIN & SMITH appeared as counsel for the administratrix, and JOHN M. COONEY, Esq., counsel for the Public Administrator, as the opposing lawyer, and on behalf of the interests of the estate.

Police Affairs.

Commissioners BOSWORTH, MANIERRE and BARRETT, yesterday, to hear complaints against policemen. The principal case was that of Capt. MORRIS DE CAMP and Officers BRIG and MORRISON, of the Second Precinct, who were charged with improper conduct by one JOHN H. MCKINLEY, whose affidavit, being burdened with all the legal phraseology, was of extreme length, but only alleged that the officers had menaced him by continually entering his restaurant and bar-room, at the corner of Fulton and South streets. There were witnesses who deposed that Capt. DE CAMP had once entered the cigar-store and threatened to "pull" the place unless the bar-room was closed, as it was either the legal hour for it to be open and that some of the officers were into the dining-room, at 3 o'clock in the morning, and said that having peeped through the shutters they had seen the bar-keeper selling rum. The Commissioners instantly put their estimate upon this sort of testimony by dismissing the complaints in open session.

A complaint was made against Detective AARON F. YOUNG, growing out of the case against his listed before Justice EOCH, and published yesterday. It was then alleged that he had been paid $1,000 to permit one HENRY SCHAFFER, alias Elkan Schmidt, whom he had arrested, to escape. At a late appearance he said he had not report either the money or the arrest at his Station-house, the complaint has been made against him, and he will be tried before the Commissioners on Friday.

The signs of higher Exchange and firmer Gold, noticed in our report last night, were confirmed today. Bills on London went up to 109½ ⅌ cent., 60 days, and 109¾@110 ⅌ cent., payable on demand or three days after sight. The sales of Gold advanced to 111@111⅛ ⅌ cent., influenced chiefly by the course of Exchange, but to some extent by Cable news of rather lower quotations for the English and American Funds in London. The markets for Gold and Exchange were firm at the close of regular Change hours.

The amount of Gold bid for at the Treasury Office, today, was $5,900,000. The award of $1,000,000 was as follows:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE

The Army of the Loire is again said to be retreating from Beaugency, before Prince FREDERICK CHARLES. The King telegraphs to the Queen in Berlin, on the 13th inst., that after four days of fighting around Beaugency, the French retired to Blois and Tours, having suffered severe losses. The German batteries are said to cover every part of Paris now, and the opening of the bombardment is to begin today. The defense of Havre by the French is deprecated by the London Shipping Gazette as useless destruction of property. The Germans are said to be within sixteen miles of the town. Pralsbourg, one of the two remaining strongholds of the French in the north-east, has capitulated, the German troops occupying the town on the 13th.

The threatened occupation of Luxembourg by the Prussians excites much comment in England. The proceeding is urged by Count VON BISMARCK as a military necessity, and the consent of the King of Holland is said to have been obtained.

The Russian forces are concentrating near the Turkish frontier, and the Eastern question is again agitated in London. Further annulments of the Treaty of Paris are asked by the Russian Ambassador in Constantinople. Great Britain is said to be preparing against a surprise.

An horrible accident occurred on the North Midland Railway, near Bainsley, England, on the 12th inst., by which fourteen persons were killed and twenty wounded. The Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland declines to receive deputations asking the pardon of the Fenian convicts, alleging that no good result is possible. The approach of the holidays has brought business in London to a standstill. Additional reports of disasters at sea are received from London and Liverpool.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, Mr. FENTON offered resolutions, which were adopted, instituting searching investigations into the cost of collecting the Customs revenue of the country, and the amount of money received and paid out at the several custom-houses. A call for information was also made respecting the collection of the tax on the scrip dividends of the New-York Central Railroad. The expense of carrying mails and freight to the Pacific Coast prior to 1864 is likewise to be inquired into, as well as the expediency of certain improvements at the mouth of the Mississippi River. The question of assessing Government clerks for the purpose of raising a fund for their benefit, was the subject of an extended debate, and was finally laid aside to allow for the consideration of the bill providing a plan for securing efficient seamen in the navy. This was introduced last session, and authorizes the receiving of boys into the navy as apprentices, to be trained for "Union seamen." With some slight amendment the bill was passed. The calendar of general and special orders was then taken up, and the question of paying a Union surgeon for property destroyed during the late war by order of Federal officers was discussed during the rest of the day and finally left undisposed of. The House resolution to adjourn from Dec. 23 to Jan. 4 was concurred in.

In the House the greater part of the day was spent in discussing the question of holding a great international exhibition of the one hundredth anniversary of our national independence, and in considering the general Amnesty bill. The former was introduced by Mr. MOORHEAD, of Pennsylvania, and provided for holding the exhibition at Philadelphia. The previous allowing mileage to the Commissioners was struck out and their actual traveling expenses allowed, instead, and the number of Commissioners was reduced to one from each State and Territory. An amendment forbidding any expense on the part of the Government, under the bill, and a proposition that the Commissioners be appointed by the Governors of States, instead of the President, were pending when the bill went over until today. The House then proceeded to consider the Amnesty bill reported by Mr. BUTLER. The matter was debated at some length, Mr. BUTLER speaking in favor of the bill, and Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, being its principal opponent. Several substitutes were offered diminishing the number of persons excepted from the benefits of the act, and one, by Mr. FARNSWORTH, of Illinois, removing all disabilities without exception. Pending the consideration of these the bill went over till today. The Legislative, Judicial and Executive Appropriation bill was then reported, and made the special order for Tuesday next, and after some additional appointments to the Committees, the House adjourned.

GENERAL.

The case of TAPPAN vs. BEARDSLEY came before the United States Supreme Court yesterday on a writ of error. The question involved is the right of so-called mercantile agencies to collect and communicate to their subscribers information regarding the financial condition and the character of merchants in the country, as privileged communications.

The resolution of the North Carolina House of Representatives impeaching Gov. HOLDEN, was reported yesterday by the Judiciary Committee and passed by a vote of 50 to 43. ☞ The Reform of the Bar.

It will be remembered that the mice once met to consult together with regard to the most effectual means of depriving their enemy, the cat, of further power of doing mischief. They decided at length that the best plan would be, to put a bell on the neck of the animal, so that when she approached they might have due warning. Then arose the important question, who should bell the cat? At this stage of the proceedings a strong difference of opinion arose, although everything had been very harmonious before. There was no doubt whatever as to the propriety of putting the bell on, but when it came to the question of finding some one to do it, the meeting broke up in confusion.

This well-worn fable represents very fairly the position of the lawyers of this City in relation to a "reform of the Bar." Most of them are agreed that reform is necessary—nay, indispensable—if the profession is not to become thoroughly dishonored in the sight of the public. They also know perfectly well which of their number are doing the most to degrade the Bar, and drag a noble calling through the mire. They meet and pass resolutions, like the mice, in favor of belling the cat. But here everything comes to an end. The eminent lawyers who are honest, shrug their shoulders, and hope that somehow or other time will correct the evils which appear now to be gaining the upper hand. The lawyers of the Erie "Ring" laugh in their sleeves, and say that while they are making fortunes out of the Erie business, nobody can expect them to relinquish any part of it.

We hope the public thoroughly understands the position of these Erie lawyers. Some people say that an advocate is bound to appear for anybody who is put on his trial, and who stands in need of legal assistance. Many eminent lawyers have been guided by that rule, although there are some who have altogether repudiated it. But with regard to the Erie business, the question raised is not at all one of that kind. The lawyers who advise FISK and GOULD, are really partly responsible for many of the acts of these men. They are not only employed to defend their clients in Courts of law, but to advise them how to bamboozle the shareholders in the Erie line, and generally to evade the fulfillment of their just obligations. Any one who knew Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, only by reputation, would have supposed that when he was asked to act as the legal adviser of JAMES FISK, Jr., he would have replied, "Certainly, I have no objection to give you my advice, but it must be upon condition that you take it. I cannot have you coming to my chambers to force your advice down my throat—that would be reversing our proper relations. For instance, if you wish my assistance, the first thing I shall advise you to do, is to make restitution to the shareholders you have so long cheated out of their own. I cannot construct arguments by which you will be enabled to make fresh victims, or commit fresh depredations on the old ones. Be honest; do what is right by your shareholders; give up the attempt to make the Erie Railroad a mere tributary to the private fortunes of FISK and GOULD. That is my first advice to you. Will you take it? If not, my clerk will show you to the door."

We believe that no man of proper principle can doubt that this, or something like it, is what Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD ought to have said. His present position is the best proof in the world that he took a very different course, and that he commenced not only to defend FISK and GOULD whenever an attempt was made to bring them to justice, but to be constantly at their service in devising fresh legal cobwebs by which more flies may be caught. Well then, we say that while this sort of business is practiced by "eminent lawyers," it is all moonshine to complain of the small fry of the profession, who offend decency by touting round the Courts, or advertising in the newspapers for business, or who otherwise violate old-fashioned professional rules. It is easy enough to denounce obscure members of the Bar. But why not have the courage to single out the prominent and "distinguished" offenders? Until this is done the public will never be convinced that the "Bar reformers" are not afraid to take those steps which, as they know very well, can alone accomplish the object they profess to have in view.

Mr. Adams and His Address.

It is a peculiarly useful experience for our countrymen to listen to such an address as that from Mr. ADAMS before the Historical Society on Tuesday evening. Not only were the views those of an expert, thoroughly familiar both with the theory and the practice of a difficult science—that of international law; not only was the sketch of history presented adorned with illustrations from the speaker's own rich experience, but the whole bore the stamp, which we do not so often see in our public men, of thorough individuality and independence of mind. It cannot be said that anywhere in the long address did Mr. ADAMS "capture" his audience, though the Academy of Music was crowded to the topmost gallery with the best of New-York, who listened for two hours to a review of history, and the account of the progress of the world in international law, as intently as they would listen to a tragedy. It was the highest tribute to the pure intellect and wisdom of the orator. There was not throughout the speech even a turn to catch popular applause. Not a rocket in the national fire-works was let off; not an allusion which might call down the house to the glories and greatness of the Republic; not even a malediction on the rival Powers with whom Mr. ADAMS must have sustained, during four years, the most disagreeable relations which ever diplomats held with a foreign Government. The whole subject of neutrality and the rights of belligerents was looked at as from the mountain top of history and the pure heights of philosophy. For all that appeared in the oration, the speaker might be regarding violations of international law from the standpoint of posterity, without ever having felt or lived under one public injustice inflicted by belligerent on neutral, or neutral on belligerent. Even the illustrations employed to show the immense and vital obligation in a statesman to resist the passion of the hour, though true, were not agreeable to the audience.

If anything is branded in the living memory of Americans, it is the shame and intense but disappointed anger with which they gave up the rebel envoys of the Trent to the demand of England. It was a wise action; it had to be done, but it was none the less repulsive. It is true that the seizure was directly against our own precedents in international law. Mr. SEWARD undoubtedly acted like a cool leader in yielding the envoys. But he did not deserve the panegyric of the orator. He did not act from any lofty philosophical views of the obligations toward neutrals. If he had, he would have saved the dignity of the country, by offering at once to the British Government to release the rebel diplomatists under reasons of universal law. Nor was Mr. ADAMS' allusion to the fallen French Emperor altogether harmonious with the feeling of the assembly. Misfortunes so gigantic as those of France deserve, even in a rhetorical illustration, treatment the most respectful from an American statesman. The criticisms of Mr. ADAMS on the great men of our past history were without doubt just, though frequently crabbed in tone. His praise, except of WASHINGTON, was always cold.

This coldness of temperament which has always been so marked a peculiarity of Mr. ADAMS, stood him in great service in his four years of diplomatic struggle with the British Government. No acerbities in the intercourse of the two Governments ever soured the cold urbanity of our Ambassador. No excitement in the critical relations of the two countries, when an angry word from him might have driven the British Ministry to the step which had been fatal to us, ever ruffled the frigid calmness and politeness of the American diplomatist. If Earl RUSSELL offered Mr. ADAMS two fingers, Mr. ADAMS offered the Earl one; if the Englishman was frigid, the American was icy. Temper or the froth of words never covered up the one great object he always held in view—to keep back the British Government from alliance with, or encouragement of the rebels. His perfect calmness, his politeness and his complete understanding of his profession and his mission, enabled him to accomplish a service to his country such as no American diplomatist has ever rendered. Had we suffered under the misfortune of having some "blatherskite," some windy and excitable talker, who did not understand the English governing classes, in the place of Mr. ADAMS at the Court of St. James, it is not too much to say that years would have been added to the civil war, and this whole country might have suffered as the South did. When the proper time came, our polite Ambassador could say the strong word. The sending out of the rebel rams, he informed the British Government, "meant war." No doubt his previous moderation made this last quiet threat the more impressive.

It need not be said that the vast audience, interested and instructed as they had been, went forth from the Academy of Music on Tuesday evening disappointed. What they had gone forth to hear was not given them. The narrative of our neutrality struggles with Great Britain they can read in any history. But Mr. ADAMS possesses a history which is not written. He has acted events which as far surpass those engaging Mr. JAY or Mr. PINCKNEY as the Republic of 1870 surpasses that of 1800. There are a thousand questions connected with those momentous events, of which he was "eye-witness," which he alone could answer, and which the public are eager to ask. The relation between our own Neutrality acts of 1818, and how far the latter is defective; the history, both secret and public, of our demands on Great Britain to observe neutrality; the true narrative of the relations of England and France toward us in the rebellion; the efforts of Mr. ADAMS and our Government to prevent the escape of the rebel cruisers; the exact position of the Alabama claims at this present time and the question of their assumption by our Government—all these grand subjects are what we should have wished illustrated by the orator, and on these we heard nothing.

Political Disabilities.

The questions involved in the maintenance or removal of political disabilities do not seem very difficult of solution. The disabilities are not the product of vindictiveness or hatred, but arose out of the exigencies of the situation consequent upon the suppression of the rebellion. They are precautionary, not penal, in their character. They were called for by the circumstances through which the country was required to pass in consummating the policy of reconstruction. At no period has there been any general disposition to uphold them a day longer than they appeared to be essential to the application and success of a broad national policy. The most influential Republican Senators and Representatives have again and again affirmed their desire to remove all disabilities, so soon as the condition of the country rendered the proceeding safe. The Convention which nominated Gen. GRANT for the Presidency, placed the whole question on that ground. It affirmed the wisdom and justice of amnesty,—leaving the matter of time for the consideration of the party in Congress.

It is idle, then, to dwell on the abstract merits of amnesty. The Senators and Representatives who discuss pending propositions as though some great favor were to be conferred, forget that the Republican Party has already proclaimed the expediency of the course sustained in one branch by Mr. SCHURZ and in the other by Mr. FARNSWORTH. The resolution offered by Mr. SCHURZ covers the whole ground:

"Resolved, That the disqualifications and disabilities imposed upon persons lately in rebellion against the Government of the United States were dictated by imperative public necessities, and not by a spirit of hatred or vindictiveness, and that as soon as such public necessities cease, due regard for the fundamental principles of our system of government, as well as every consideration of sound statesmanship, demand the removal of those disqualifications and disabilities."

When the time comes for action, the considerations which dictate the removal of disabilities also dictate the doing of it in the most acceptable manner. It is possible to spoil a measure in itself intended to be beneficial by exacting ungenerous conditions, or by displaying a grudging, vindictive temper. If amnesty is to be granted at all, let it be granted graciously. Reservations and provisos aimed at particular classes of influential men, take from the proceeding all semblance of magnanimity. If it is not prudent to restore the entire South to the full privileges of citizenship,—let the case be so understood. Those concerned must abide the advent of a more auspicious day. On the other hand, if we have reached a point at which danger to the Union may be considered passed,—if we conclude that the condition of things anticipated by the Chicago Convention has been reached, and that amnesty may therefore be conceded without fear,—then let the relief be so tendered that it shall help to obliterate the remnants of ill feeling, as well as to perfect the restoration of the Union.

Judged by these standards, Gen. BUTLER'S bill is most objectionable. Either it goes too far, or it does not go far enough. Practically it acknowledges the expediency of amnesty. Its operation, however, is so fettered by conditions that it will aggravate the irritation it is intended to allay, and so frustrate the very purpose of the policy to be applied. It will inflict more wounds than it will heal, and will be regarded by a large body of the Southern people as an insult, rather than as a pledge of reconciliation and peace.

Has the time arrived when any legislation on the subject is desirable? It is for Congress to supply an answer. Missouri, which more than any other State has tested the efficacy of disabilities, has pronounced in favor of their removal. We believe that the prevailing opinion throughout the North and West, even among Republicans, sustains that decision. The conviction gains ground that proscription is no longer necessary, and that the South, having been restored to its place in the Union, should be made to feel that the animosities kindled by the rebellion are fast dying out. The Union is safe now, without the aid of disabilities. Those who still suffer from them are not thereby divested of influence. The status which marked them out for proscription confers upon them social and political weight, whether there be amnesty or not. Shall we provoke these men into unrelenting enmity by excluding them from the privileges of citizenship, or constitute them living examples of the generosity and conscious strength of Republican statesmanship?

The Luxembourg Question.

In 1867, France and Prussia were on the brink of a war, having for its object the possession of Luxembourg. France wanted to purchase the Grand Duchy with its area of 900 square miles, and proposed incorporating its two hundred thousand inhabitants, without asking the consent of anybody save its titular Grand Duke, the King of Holland. The majority of the Great Powers who had guaranteed the neutrality of this territory were perfectly willing that a rather loosely-worded treaty should by this means be removed from the list of international obligations. Prussia had just then finished her little difficulty with Austria rather more promptly than the French Emperor expected, and had placed himself at the head of the North German Confederation. The King of Holland thought fit to apprise his august neighbor at Berlin of the transaction which the Cabinet of Paris was extremely anxious to smuggle through with all convenient speed. There is every reason to believe that Count BISMARCK was well aware of the scheme of his friend at the Tuileries with regard to the Duchy. It is even probable that its peaceful acquisition was one of the conditions made between the two arch conspirators, during their frequent walks on the sands at Biarritz, as the price of the neutrality of France during the Austrian campaign of 1866. The effusive frankness of the King of Holland was the means of bringing the matter before the North German Parliament, and that body, then in the early glow of its Pan-German patriotism, vowed that Fatherland would go to war rather than an ancient fief of the Empire and a member of the old Diet should be absorbed by their traditional enemy. Nothing loth to find a decent pretext for getting out of an awkward verbal engagement, Count BISMARCK protested that he found events too strong for him, and a Conference was assembled in London in May, 1867, to endeavor to avert the struggle that appeared imminent between France and Prussia. In point of fact, neither Power was quite ready to fight, or the Conference certainly never would have assembled. Prussia had a rather higher opinion then, of the French military strength than she has today, and France was not altogether prepared to cope with the needle-gun. It was made, nevertheless, a standing reproach against the Emperor by such Frenchmen as GIRARDIN, that he allowed the opportunity to slip of entering on what was then felt to be an inevitable struggle, and of allowing himself to be so completely outwitted by the more astute Brandenburger. Taking everything into account, it is not too much to say that Luxembourg was the proximate cause of the present war.

The Conference of London framed a treaty which was a very explicit, but very useless, document. It was signed on behalf of their respective Governments by the representatives of Austria, Russia, Prussia, France, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands. Under its provisions the Prussian garrison who had up till that time occupied the town of Luxembourg as a Federal fortress, evacuated the place, its defenses were razed, and the Grand Duchy, under the collective guarantee of all the signatories except Belgium, herself a neutral State, was declared to "form a State perpetually neutral." An after question was raised about the precise meaning of the neutrality clause of the treaty, which elicited the official declaration from Russia and England that they understood it merely as a "joint guarantee, and not involving an obligation for any of the States to enforce such a guarantee individually." This lucid explanation, of course, rendered the treaty, for all practical purposes, so much waste paper, and will render its present abrogation by Prussia a matter which need not necessarily form a casus belli. That there is a manifest destiny in the annexation of Luxembourg to Prussia a glance at the map will readily show. Her evident determination to hold Alsace and Lorraine renders Luxembourg indispensable for the proper rectification of the frontier.

MINOR TOPICS.

Out of a copious supply of rumors, three points of importance are certain in today's war dispatches. The Prussians have by this time invested Havre; the Army of the Loire is in full retreat, one wing going in the direction of Tours, the other concentrating at Bourges; and Paris, if not now under bombardment, will certainly be so in a few days. The Prussian statement that their batteries command the whole of Paris must be received with considerable reserve. The average distance of the German positions from the outer enceinte is about three miles, this in its turn is at least one mile from the inner fortifications, so that unless from the neighborhood of St. Cloud, from which certain suburbs can be easily shelled, it is not very probable that great damage can as yet be inflicted upon the city. The moral effect of the bombardment may, however, be very considerable.

In a little more than three months hence, Rome will formally become the capital of a united Italy. In less stirring times, the event would have profoundly moved the entire civilized world. Overshadowed as it is by changes still more momentous, it marks an epoch in modern history, and prefigures a fresh departure of a national life whose record is one of the most brilliant in human annals. Pious protests against the event will not even have the force of the legal formula of taking exceptions, since every Power in Christendom views the crowning of the edifice of Italian freedom if not with satisfaction, at least without the slightest intention of interfering with it.

Readers of the Erckmann-Chatrian novels will hear with a special pang of regret of the surrender of Pralsbourg. "Le Blocus," one of the most charming of the series, records the heroic resistance it offered to the last Prussian siege. Posterity will read, with unfeigned admiration, the wonderful strength of endurance with which it has faced the present one. The battle of Woerth and MCMAHON'S retreat from Sarverne are events which already seem very old, and yet the investment of Pralsbourg immediately followed them. Corps after corps of Germans swept past it into the heart of France. Strasbourg, Metz, Verdun, Thionville yielded in turn to the invaders, but still Pralsbourg defied these from its rocky eminence, and now it will probably be found to have only anticipated by a short time the surrender of the capital which was invested nearly two months later.

The Australian proposition to obtain from European Powers a recognition of the neutrality of the colonies in the event of England becoming a belligerent, does not obtain much favor from the London Press. Mr. GAVAN DUFFY, of Young Ireland fame, is the reputed author of the proposition. The Spectator discards it as a chimera. The Economist declares that the real issue growing out of the colonial relation cannot be thus easily evaded. "Both the United Kingdom and the colonies," it says, "must choose boldly between the policy of independence and the policy of real identification of interests in all Imperial matters." From this dilemma there is no escape. There is but one method of securing for the colonies immunity from the risks which identification with England implies, and that is the acceptance of the policy of independence. It is not possible to share the profits of British connection, whatever they may be, without being liable to its penalties.

Various hints reach us that, however Russia may choose to temporize until the issue of the Prussian campaign is more clearly defined, she is making immense preparations for possible contingencies. The Financier, of London, has private advices that vast quantities of munitions of war are constantly arriving at Odessa, in the Crimea, and many places on the northern shores of the Black Sea. Meanwhile, the Poti-Koutais section of the railway now being built in the Caucasus is to be completed, it is said, in a few months. The contract up to Koutais is to be finished soon, under heavy penalties for delay. Military purposes, almost exclusively, will be subserved by this line, which certainly has no obvious commercial advantages. It is plain that the lessons of the Crimean war have been carefully remembered, and that Russia will strive to profit by them in the future.

Mayor HALL estimates the minimum value of the Croton Aqueduct property as a hundred millions of dollars, (vide speech at Cooper Institute, Nov. 5.) The cost of maintaining that great work is now defrayed wholly by the annual Tax Levy, the revenues from water-rents being devoted to the Sinking Fund. As the loans which were made to defray the cost of the water-works are now nearly all provided for by the accumulations of the Sinking Fund, the time is not far distant when the entire income from the water-rents may be devoted to the reduction of the taxes, as suggested by one of our correspondents. We are unable to state what is the present annual income from water-rents, not having been favored with the usual annual City report of the Controller for 1869. In 1868, the amount was represented to be $1,322,404. It is understood that the rates of those rents are considerably less than in most other cities in this country.

In the days when amity upon the former basis between North and South was thought impracticable, it was proposed to have two Presidents, officiating conjointly as regards other nations, but wielding exclusive sway, respectively, on either side of the line of Mason and Dixon. Something like this has just been brought about in England by the death of the hereditary Lord Great Chamberlain, Lord WILLOUGHBY D'ERESBY. The deceased Peer left no issue, but had two sisters, both of whom now claim his office, and both of whom, it is said, will be recognized as having a title to it. It is remarkable that in 1399 precisely the same incident occurred. The barony of Willoughby d'Eresby then fell into abeyance through the death of the Duke of ANCASTER and KESTEVEN, and the House of Lords decided that the Chamberlainship became vested in two sisters of the deceased Duke, and that they could appoint a deputy—a precedent which will probably be followed in the present instance.

England is pushing her policy of colonial confederation. The Dominion of Canada came first. The Australian colonies are preparing for a federative Union. And the last mail brings intelligence that those of the West India Islands which belong to the British Crown are also to be federalized without delay. The pretence assigned is, that such a Union "would lighten taxation and relieve the central Power of local influence." The experience of our northern neighbors does not justify the statement. The taxation of New-Brunswick, for example, has been largely increased under confederation, and Ottawa is described as a veritable hot-bed of petty and corrupt intrigues. Apart from these considerations, we see no reason to doubt the purpose attributed to the British Government. It is testing the process of consolidation, and this hemisphere will witness its development.

The Erie managers have the reputation—perhaps it would be more exact to say the notoriety—of being shrewd financiers. But none of their many little "dodges" is neater than the trick whereby the belated passenger on the Erie Road, who has not had time to purchase a ticket at the station, finds himself mulcted in double the regular fare on the cars. If he remonstrates he is referred to a notice not too conspicuously posted in the station waiting-room, informing all who may chance to see it that fifty per cent. discount of the "train" fare (!) will be allowed to all who buy tickets at the station. The words "fifty per cent." are printed in very large type, and the rest of the notice considerably smaller. The ingenuity of this device we can scarcely too much admire. On many other roads it is usual to charge a slight advance, say five or ten per cent. on all fares collected on the cars. The object, of course, is to lessen the duties and probably the temptations of the conductor. But not even Erie audacity could venture to impose so monstrous a tax as 100 per cent., so, the conditions are reversed, and by a dexterous twist, the imposition is made to appear as a favor. Financial genius like this is not found every day.

VENEZUELA.

Trade of the Ports in Revolution—Commerce Suspended—Guzman's Army Rapidly Approaching, and the Blockade Imminent—A Loan Forced at the Point of the Bayonet.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MARACAIBO, Wednesday, Nov. 23, 1870.

The greatest consternation prevails here in consequence of the combination of several threatening dangers. The inhabitants are paralyzed with fear, the stores are all closed, and business of every kind is at a stand-still. What is to be done to avert the impending calamity? is the question on every tongue. Merchants and tradesmen, lawyers and diplomats meet on the street, and eagerly discuss the gravest state of affairs without finding any solution. Meanwhile the final struggle rapidly approaches.

GUZMAN'S SUCCESSES.

The arrival of the Cuban vessels, especially the Virgen, is hourly expected to commence the blockade, in accordance with the terms of an agreement entered into between GUZMAN BLANCO and QUESADA. On the land side GUZMAN is approaching with a large portion of his victorious army from Coro. The battles of Coro were long continued and well sustained, but, finally, after seven days' severe fighting, during which every inch of ground was valiantly fought for, the army of HERNANDEZ was compelled to yield, and GUZMAN triumphantly took possession of the town, which had so seriously suffered.

MONEY DEMANDED BY HERNANDEZ.

To render more desperate the deplorable condition of the people of Maracaibo, HERNANDEZ is in the city expressing his fixed determination to defend it to the last. Being entirely without means, and having no funds to supply them, he some time ago called for a loan of $50,000, which not coming in fast enough, he has declared his intention of procuring, if need be, at the point of the bayonet. The merchants and others who could supply this loan appear to have lost faith in the final success of HERNANDEZ, and are unwilling to subscribe, unless something unforeseen transpire, either to put an end to the struggle without further bloodshed, or to give GUZMAN possession of the city without any protracted fighting. The River Cuenta is now completely blockaded, and in possession of GUZMAN'S army, consequently not a grain of coffee finds its way into the city, and vessels which have been waiting for cargo will be compelled to load with fustic and leave as quickly as possible. Thus, with their immediate supplies cut off, capitulation or starvation is the inevitable result. The final struggle cannot be long delayed, and will, without doubt, be the most determined and bloody contest which Venezuela has seen for many a day.

THE WARDS OF THE NATION.

Fancy Fair and Bazaar for Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans—Great Preparations and Great Expectations.

Among the numerous fancy fairs of the season, which have afforded so much innocent enjoyment and achieved so much real good, not only by the large sums raised for charitable and benevolent objects, but in affording scope for the exercise of the best impulses of our nature, the Fair which opens to-morrow for the orphans of our soldiers and sailors promises to be one of the most enjoyable for the visitors, and deserves to be one of the most successful in a financial point of view. It is designed by its promoters, who number among them all the distinguished General officers of the Grand Army of the Republic, and it is hardly too much to say in advance that it is destined to eclipse every bazaar that has yet been opened here. The Bazaar opens this evening, under the most favorable auspices. Among the prominent gentlemen who will attend and deliver addresses are Gen. MCCLELLAN, Hon. Mr. EVERETT, Gen. DIX and Rev. Dr. BELLOWS. The preparations by the lady patrons are on the most costly and elaborate scale, and no effort is being spared to render the latest fancy Fair the best of the season.

Through the courtesy of the directors, the reporter of the TIMES was favored with a view of the rooms last night, and he can therefore furnish the public in advance with some idea of what they may expect to see and enjoy during the days the Fair will last. It was something like an undress rehearsal of some magnificent plays. Around the room were groups of gentlemen, many of them of the highest social standing, earnestly discussing the best methods of arranging the various articles for exhibition. Here a bevy of beauties were laying out tastefully various rare and beautiful products of the artist in statuary and porcelain; and in other rooms might be seen some of the fairest of New-York's fair ones carrying to their destined places articles of vertu, vases, flowers, paintings and groups of statuary. All was in elegant disarray, but a few hours later, and the rooms would, as if by the wand of a magician, become like a fairy scene. The first table at the left will be in charge of Mrs. Col. ARCHIBALD, who will have a splendid collection of the choicest cigars, meerschaums, &c., arranged in a fashion perfectly new and striking. The next tables will be in charge of Mrs. Gen. LAKE, Mrs. Gen. FREMONT, Mrs. Gen. LAUMAN and Mrs. Judge DALY, and will be covered with china and bronzes. The next table will be in care of the ladies of officers of the Grand Army of the Republic. A magnificent floral temple, graced by the most beautiful young ladies of Brooklyn, will form a feature of the Bazaar. The other tables are in charge of Mrs. Gen. Hopper, Mrs. Gen. Pleasonton, Miss Johnson, Mrs. Hetteboster, Miss Dumond, Miss Sutton, of Brooklyn, Miss Stevenson, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Gen. Montague, and one, not the least attraction, will be attended by children of soldiers. Among the novelties during the Fair will be the exhibition of "living portraits" by young ladies—an intensely interesting spectacle, never before exhibited at a New-York bazaar.

The Crispins' Strike—Widening of the Breach.

Every day the breach between the Crispins on strike and their late employers becomes wider, and at present there seems scarcely a possibility of an amicable understanding, and an early settlement of the difficulty between them being arrived at. The manufacturers appear determined to keep their ground, and the Crispins seem equally determined not to submit to the reduction of their wages. A meeting of the Striking Committee was held, last evening, at No. 114 Chambers-street, and reports were received from the

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.

MEMORIALS.

Memorials were presented by Messrs. CONKLING, of New-York, and SHERMAN, of Ohio, representing that many of the veterans of the War of 1812 are now inmates of poorhouses, and objects of charity, and praying for pensions in their behalf; and

Mr. FENTON, of New-York, presented a memorial praying Congress to define the regulation of charges of international telegraph lines.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced and appropriately referred as follows:

By Mr. PATTERSON, of New-Hampshire—To refund the Capitol Hill Savings Bank of Washington, D. C.

By Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio—To amend section 7 of the act to provide a temporary government for the Territory of Montana.

CUSTOM-HOUSE INVESTIGATIONS.

Mr. FENTON, of New-York, submitted the following:

Resolved, That the Committee on Retrenchment be instructed to furnish a comparative detailed statement of the cost of collecting the Customs revenue at the ports of New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, New-Orleans and San Francisco, with such recommendations favoring a reduction on such expenses as they may deem compatible with the interest of the public service. Also to particularly report on the present system and practices connected with the warehousing business at the port of New-York. Also in relation to what is commonly known as the "general order business," and the storage of goods while in the custody of the Government. Adopted.

Mr. FENTON also submitted the following:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to furnish the Senate information showing the amount of money paid into the Treasury as the proceeds of fines, penalties, forfeitures and seizures by Customs officers at the ports of New-York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New-Orleans, San Francisco, since the 1st day of January, 1867, up to and including the 30th day of November, 1870, stating whether any, and if so, what sums of money were obtained by the United States Courts in compromises with parties detected in the commission of frauds, and the causes of such seizures and forfeitures, and of the existence of such fraud and penalties. Also, a statement of the amounts paid as moieties by the Treasury out of funds thus received, to officers of Customs in the ports above named, and to informers in such cases, with the name of the person from whom such moieties have been exacted, and the amount received from each in all cases where the amount exceeds $1,000 or more, as also the amount to whom such moneys have been paid, and the amount thereof respectively. Also, the names of parties at the different ports above named who have been detected in defrauding the Government of Customs revenue, and who have been prosecuted, criminally convicted, and punished therefor otherwise than by the payment of money. Adopted.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL SCRIP DIVIDENDS.

Mr. NYE submitted and asked the present consideration of a resolution requesting the Secretary of the Treasury to communicate to the Senate proceedings that have been had relative to the collection of the tax on 45,000,000 of scrip dividends of the New-York Central Railroad Company, and whether said tax has been paid into the Treasury of the United States. Adopted.

OTHER RESOLUTIONS OFFERED.

Other resolutions were offered as follows:

By Mr. STEWART, of Nevada—Requesting the President to furnish the Senate with a statement of the cost of transportation of mails and troops by rail, description to the Pacific Coast, and to all intermediate points west of the Missouri River, from the date of the annexation of California, to July 1, 1869, and also the expenditures of the Quartermaster's and Indian Bureau during the same period, in guarding the Overland Route, from the Missouri River to California, against Indians and Mormons, and the cost of the Indian service on the same line, including all cases of freight and all other expenditures. Under objection the resolution went over.

By Mr. HAMLIN, of Louisiana—Instructing the Committee on Commerce to inquire into the expediency of constructing and maintaining at the expense of and under the exclusive superintendence of the General Government, a ship-canal from Mississippi River, at or near Fort St. Philippe, to a point near Biloxi, Island, on the Gulf of Mexico, the canal to be open to all commerce entering or departing from the Mississippi River. Adopted.

HOLIDAY RECESS.

The House resolution for a recess over the Christmas holidays, from the 23d of December to Jan. 4, was concurred in. Yeas 36; nays 16.

FRAUDS IN THE INDIAN BUREAU.

Mr. ROSS, of Kansas, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported back and asked for present consideration of the joint resolution relative to the Miami Indian Reservation, Kansas.

Mr. ROSS, in reply to his colleague Mr. POMEROY, stated that he had no doubt of the commission of great frauds in the sale of lands in the reservation, but that the only object of the bill was to secure a suspension of issuance of evidences of title until after an investigation. The resolution was passed.

ASSESSMENT OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES.

The bill to provide a relief fund for employes in the Executive Department of the Government was reported, with amendments, by Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, from the Finance Committee.

The bill was taken up, on motion of Mr. DRAKE, of Missouri, and discussed for one hour by Messrs. CONKLING, of New-York, DAWES, of Kentucky, MORTON, of Indiana, DRAKE, of Missouri, TIPTON, of Nebraska, HOWE, of Wisconsin, and HOWELL, of Iowa.

The question turned upon the propriety of levying compulsory contributions upon Government clerks to defray funeral expenses of deceased associates and for other purposes. It was objected that the proposed legislation could have no binding efficacy, and was belittling to the clerks.

Mr. TIPTON was in favor of obviating various difficulties in connection with Government clerkships by securing greater permanency in the tenure of such offices.

Mr. HOWELL proposed the establishment of a regular and sufficient fund to relieve all actual want in the District of Columbia. He detailed the circumstances attending a deplorable case of destitution recently coming under his notice in Washington, and remarked that it was a burning shame and a hideous crime on the part of some one that actual want should exist within the shadow of the Capitol.

Mr. HOWE, of Wisconsin, said the continued cry by Government clerks about the insufficiency of their pay had no effect upon the country at large; that, as heretofore, hundreds of persons daily made application, either personally or by letter, to members of Congress for clerkships. The inference was that they were enabled to realize larger compensation here than elsewhere. He went on to show that Washington City had been scandalously slandered by unwarranted reports as to extra charges for the ordinary expenses of living. His own experience was that the rates of living were very reasonable.

Mr. DAVIS, of Kentucky, offered an amendment, prohibiting political assessments in all offices.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, submitted as a substitute for the amendment, the bill previously introduced by him on the same subject.

Mr. DRAKE, of Missouri, good humoredly indicated a modification of Mr. DAVIS' amendment, to the effect that the prohibition should cease as soon as the Democratic Party came into power. [Laughter.]

Mr. SAULSBURY, of Delaware, remarked that the lesson taught Senator from Missouri, in his own State, had doubtless opened his eyes to the fact that the party of which he was so distinguished a member was about passing out of existence, to make way for the great national party, which, though temporarily defeated by fraud and violence, was soon about to unfold its time-honored flag above a reunited country. He would advise his friend (Mr. DRAKE) while yet in time, to return like the prodigal mentioned in the Scripture to his father's house, confessing himself no more worthy to be called a son.

Mr. DRAKE replied by an allusion to the probable exclusion of the Democracy from power until some far distant day in the future. In response to Mr. SAULSBURY's invitation, he had only to say that the scriptural prodigal, after leaving his father's house, consumed his substance in riotous living, and after his return was repentant. The Democratic Party of the South had left him (DRAKE) and spent its substance in riotous living, treason and rebellion against the Government, and when, by reason of their course, they had been reduced to feeding on husks, and had repented, he would receive them back; never would he go back to them.

Mr. SAULSBURY said the parallel of the prodigal son did not hold good in one particular in reference to Mr. DRAKE, for while the former, after leaving his father's house, had fed on husks like swine, the latter, since he became a prodigal, had fared more sumptuously than ever.

PLAN FOR OBTAINING EFFICIENT SEAMEN.

Mr. DRAKE then withdrew his amendment, and upon his motion, in order to economize time, the bill was laid aside, and the bill of the last session "to promote securing of efficient seamen for the Navy of the United States" was substituted.

This bill provides that in addition to the number of men and boys now authorized in the navy, there shall be received annually, from all parts of the country, not more than 800 boys, from fifteen to seventeen years of age, who, after passing a moral and physical examination, shall serve as navy apprentices until twenty-one years old, to be known as Union apprentices, and to receive such pay as fixed by the President. Upon arriving at their majority, such apprentices, if passing the proper examination, shall be promoted to the grade of Union seamen, either of the close or ordinary seamen. The Union seamen shall be eligible to promotion to petty officer, warrant and position of warrant officers. Seamen now in the navy may, after five years' service, upon proper qualification of their fitness, by their commanding officers, and passing examination, be entitled to receive an appointment as Union seamen.

The bill passed as amended by an additional section, giving to non-commissioned officers, seamen, ordinary seamen, and hereafter enlisting in the naval service, the same allowance for clothing as is or may be allowed to non-commissioned officers and privates in the army and marine corps.

PAYMENT OF WAR CLAIMS.

The Senate took up the calendar of general and special orders, the first in order being the bill appropriating $25,000 to compensate J. MILLER PRIST, of Paducah, Ky., a Union surgeon, for the destruction of his dwelling-house, in 1864, by order of the Union commander, during the rebel attack upon the place. The general questions of the liability of the Government to pay for private property taken for public use; whether the destruction of the premises, in the prosecution of an act of war, was, if a constitutional person an appropriation for public use; and the peculiar features of the case were discussed during the remainder of the session by Messrs. WILLEY, of West Virginia; SCOTT, of Pennsylvania; MONTON, of Indiana, in favor of the claim, and CHANDLER, of Michigan, in opposition. Mr. CHANDLER said the principle of the bill involved the payment of claims, of which this was a representative, amounting in the aggregate to $1,000,000,000, one effect of which would be to make the Treasury bankrupt and to repudiate the national debt. Mr. WILLEY argued that the practical operation during the war of the principle adverted to by the opponents of the bill, would have prevented the creation of any national debt. It was a virtual acknowledgement at the risks of the Union armies, to lay violent hands upon all private property, whether in New-York, Pennsylvania or Michigan, which was needed for Government use, without any obligations upon the Government to make restitution therefor.

Mr. MORTON, in advocacy of the claim, argued that it differed in principle from the great batch of similar claims for indemnity.

Without disposing of the bill, the Senate, at 5½ P. M., went into Executive Session, and ten minutes later adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

PETITIONS.

Mr. STEVENSON, of Ohio, presented a resolution of the National Board of Trade in favor of an appropriation for the improvement of Des Moines Rapids, the Louisville Canal, and the mouth of the Mississippi River, protesting against railroad bridges being so built as to obstruct navigation, and asking that all bridges over navigable streams be made public highways.

Mr. FOX, of New-York, presented a petition of envelope manufacturers, printers, and stationers, of New-York, against interference with their business by the Post-office Department.

BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. RENVE—Providing for the sale of lands belonging to the United States at Sag Harbor, L. I.

By Mr. POMEROY—To amend the act of the 6th of July, 1866, respecting the judicial system of the United States.

Mr. STEVENSON offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of War for the report of the Commissioner to examine the bridges over the Ohio River, which was adopted.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION IN 1876.

Mr. MORRELL, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Manufactures, reported a bill to provide for celebrating the hundredth anniversary of American independence by holding an international exhibition of arts, manufactures and products of the soil and mines, in the City of Philadelphia, in the year 1876. He asked that it be postponed, and made the special order for the fourth Thursday in January. Objection to its being made a special order was made by Mr. ALLISON, of Iowa, and the House proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. MORRELL addressed the House, adverting to the great historical facts which rendered such a celebration highly appropriate, and Philadelphia the proper place to hold it in. He said he was authorized to state that if Congress gave to the celebration a national character by the passage of the bill, the authorities of Philadelphia would put up all the necessary buildings in Fairmount Park, and make all the proper arrangements without any expense to the General Government.

Mr. CLEVELAND, of New-Jersey, while willing to let all the bill had been said in favor of Philadelphia and its character and position as the great manufacturing city of the country, and as the Mecca of American liberty, was nevertheless opposed to the bill as covering a great scheme, greater than could be developed in the discussion of to-day. He himself had been the first to bring the subject to the attention of the House in a resolution which he had offered at the last session, directing the Committee on Manufactures to inquire and report whether the International Industrial Exhibition, proposed to be held in New-York in 1876, under the auspices of the United States Institute, should receive the indorsement of the General Government, so as to give it a national character. He spoke of the high character and great experience of the American Institute, and remarked that instead of the matter being kept under its control, all sorts of speculating propositions of the same character were starting up all over the country. He regarded this as one of them. He calculated that the mileage of the Commissioners, whose appointment is provided in the bill, would amount to between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000.

Mr. MYERS, of Pennsylvania, addressed the House in support of the bill.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, moved to amend the bill by striking out the provision for mileage of the Commissioners, and in lieu thereof that they should be paid their actual traveling expenses.

Mr. MORRELL accepted the amendment.

Mr. ALLISON, of Iowa, objected to the large number of Commissioners provided for in the bill—three from each State and Territory—and moved to reduce them to one from each State and Territory. Agreed to.

Mr. WELKER, of Ohio, moved an amendment, providing that no expense shall be incurred by the United States under the bill.

Mr. CLEVELAND, of New-Jersey, moved to amend by providing that the appointment of the Commissioners shall be made by the Governors of the several States, instead of by the President.

The last two amendments were considered pending, when the bill went over till to-morrow.

THE GENERAL AMNESTY BILL.

The House then proceeded, at 1½, to the consideration of the bill for full and general grace, amnesty and oblivion of all wrongful acts, doings, and omissions of all persons engaged in the war of the late rebellion.

Exceptions from its Benefits.

The exceptions are contained in the third section, which reads as follows:

SECTION 3.—And be it further enacted, That the following classes of persons, and the rights, titles and causes of action and matters, hereinafter set forth, shall be excepted from all provisions of the act, and shall receive no benefit therefrom: First—Whoever having been educated at the Military Academy at West Point, or the Naval School at Annapolis, shall have engaged in the rebellion and insurrection against the United States, and shall have given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. Second—Whoever having been a member of either House of Congress of the United States, shall have engaged in the rebellion against the United States, and shall have given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof, and whoever was a member of the so-called Confederate Congress. Third—Whoever shall have held the office of head of one of the Executive Departments of the Government of the United States, or Minister Plenipotentiary, or Minister Resident, or Judge of any Court of the United States, and shall have engaged in rebellion or insurrection against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof, and whoever shall have held either of the like offices, under the so-called Confederate States. Fourth—Whoever, as a member of a Convention, shall have voted for or in any other manner put the action of any State, or whoever shall have held the office of Governor of such State, while the same was in rebellion. Fifth—Whoever, while in the service of the so-called Confederate States, treated with cruelty or otherwise than according to the usages of war, any prisoner of war held by the authority of the so-called Confederate States. Sixth—Whoever, having charge and custody of the public moneys of the United States, intrusted to them between said dates, have not duly accounted for and paid over the same, and whoever shall have misapplied or secreted public stores, public goods, chattels, moneys, provisions, or military and naval property of the United States. Seventh—All deserters from the Army and Navy of the United States, and all bounty jumpers. Eighth—All property and rights of property acquired by any levy, judgment or extent made and executed upon any lands or tenements, goods and chattels or other valuables whatsoever, by reason of any sale or forfeiture by confiscation or taxation, whereby any rights or titles have become vested either in the United States or in third persons. Ninth—Any piece or parcel of land hereafter to be described or bounded, which now is or has been used as a cemetery in which the bodies of the soldiers of the United States are interred; which is in the occupation of the United States for the purpose of a cemetery, which parcels of land are hereby declared the property of the United States in fee by capture in war, and forever dedicated to the uses and purposes of a cemetery for the soldiers of the United States hereafter interred or hereafter to be interred therein, and be under the sole jurisdiction of the United States for such purpose, indefeasibly forever. Provided, that nothing herein contained shall affect or impair the validity of any act of Congress removing the political disabilities of any person herein excepted from the benefit of the provisions of this act. And all persons whose political disabilities have heretofore been removed shall be entitled to all the benefits conferred by this act. Tenth—Every right of action and liability arising on any ordinance, law, or contract in aid of the rebellion, and every such right shall be deemed invalid.

Debate on the Bill.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, who reported the bill from the Committee on Reconstruction, proceeded to explain and advocate it. He said it was drawn mutatis mutandis from the Amnesty bill passed by the English Parliament after the Scotch rebellion of 1745. He quoted from the preamble and body of the act, and referred to the exceptions in it, among which were all persons of the name and clan of MACGREGOR, and all who had been in favor of having the French Army invade Great Britain. He wished that the state of the country was such that all of the exceptions could be struck out, but such was not the state of the country. The bill swept out everything that had been done wrong on one side as well as the other, and said that no more suits could be brought for acts done or committed during the war, either by those who warred in behalf of the United States, or by those who warred against it. It threw the mantle of charity over all. The bill excepted the leaders of the rebellion; but why should they not be excepted? They had played for empire and lost, and should now take the penalty of the lost. It would be seen that the first section only applied to those military and naval officers of the United States who had received their education at West Point or Annapolis. It did not apply to officers who had not been so educated. As to the provision referring to national cemeteries, he said he thought it time after hearing an eulogy in the Senate on Gen. LEE, that the idea that these cemeteries could be in any way tampered with, should be put an end to. If the Union soldiers did anything during the war, they certainly conquered land enough to be buried in. He wanted this bill passed, if for no other reason, so that question might be settled forever. An objection has been made to the bill that it was not a general amnesty. He was not the most forgiving of men, and he treated his enemies and friends alike. He could remain unforgiving as long as his neighbors, and he could forgive an honorable opponent quite as early as his neighbor; but when he did forgive, he forgave all over, and when he did not forgive, he remembered all over.

Mr. LAWRENCE, of Ohio, asked how many persons the bill would relieve?

Mr. BUTLER replied that it would relieve everybody in the South who was under legal trouble or vexation. It would relieve every man who held a Post-office, or who was a Sheriff or constable before the war, and who had taken the oath to support the Constitution. As to excepted classes, all they had to do was to come to Congress hereafter and petition for the removal of their disabilities.

Substitutes Offered.

Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, offered a substitute for the bill, as follows:

That all persons who shall have hereafter accepted, now disqualified to hold office by the third section of the insurrection article of the amendment to the Constitution of the United States, are hereby relieved from such disabilities, and the same is hereby removed from them.

Mr. BUTLER said he could not vote for this, except from the following classes of persons. First—Whoever having been educated at the Military Academy at West Point, or Naval School at Annapolis, shall have engaged in the rebellion and insurrection against the United States, or given aid and comfort to the enemies thereof. Second—Whoever having been a member of either House of Congress of the United States, shall have engaged in the rebellion against the United States, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof, and whoever was a member of the so-called Confederate Congress. Third—Whoever shall have held the office of head of one of the Executive Departments of the Government of the United States, or Minister Plenipotentiary, or Minister Resident, or Judge of any Court of the United States, and shall have engaged in rebellion or insurrection against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof, and whoever shall have held either of the like offices, under the so-called Confederate States. Fourth—Whoever, as a member of a Convention, shall have voted for or in any other manner put the action of any State, or whoever shall have held the office of Governor of such State, while the same was in rebellion. CHRISTIAN MORAL SCIENCE.

Clergymen's Breakfast at the Astor House.

Remarks of Henry Ward Beecher, Drs. Buddington, Duryea, Ridgaway, Pentecost and Others —The Christian Moral Science Association in a Fair Way Toward Completion.

The third breakfast in the series given at the instance of Rev. Dr. CATHER, and in furtherance of his object of forming a Christian Moral Science Association in this country, was participated in yesterday, by nearly 100 ministers and laymen of different denominations in this City, Brooklyn and vicinity, at the Astor House. Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, presided, and among those present were Rev. Drs. Conant, Buddington, Duryea, Ridgaway, Foster, of Drew Theological Seminary; Anderson, of Rochester University; Robinson, Roche, Ormiston, McVicker, W. McAlister, G. H. Corey, J. Parker, Brown, Merwin, Payson, Pentecost, Tiffany, of Newark; Daniel Drew, Esq., Judge Emerson, of New-Jersey; Capt. Moreland, and others. The blessing was invoked by Dr. BUDDINGTON, of Brooklyn, and after the breakfast had been concluded, Dr. McVICKER read a portion of John, seventeenth chapter—the Savior's prayer for Christian unity. Rev. Dr. TIFFANY thereafter returned thanks, and then Mr. BEECHER spoke as follows:

REMARKS BY REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, on rising, was received with cheers. He said: It is entirely congenial to my feelings to be present to sympathize with all those brethren in the object which has brought us together this morning, namely, to seek a way whereby without attempting to disrupt the external forms of organization in the Christian Church, and without attempting to persuade men to undervalue their own dogmatic conclusions in regard to truth, we still may find a common sympathy such that we shall be consciously united in one brotherhood, although organized differently in the great field of our labors. For such a union as this the world has waited long. That such a union was contemplated by our Divine Master, I think none can well doubt. That there was to be a union of all His followers none do doubt. That there never has been such a union all do know. That all attempts to come to it from the outside have signally failed we are as sure. It is said, I know not how it is with modern physiology, that the seed contains in its germ the perfect formation of the coming tree, and that if we had eyes sharp enough to detect it we should find the tree clearly hidden in the little invisible germ in the seed. I hold in the seed formed of the Gospel as enunciated by our Lord Jesus Christ, there was wrapped up all that development and growth which has been taking place through two thousand years, and which seed eventually must produce a perfect fruit, and that in the great unfolding, or according to modern phrase, in the great development which is coming on in religious feeling, we are not following any but God; are not following an external or material law so much as an internal divine law and principle, and that we are coming at last, through great trials and convulsions, to the final fruit and form of Christianity, as it was designed by our Master Jesus, and it is to be substantial unity of heart. For if we are one in heart we are not oppugnant, though we may be different in everything besides. He made alone has in himself such magnitude or so many phases from which the truth reflects, as that he can, or any single class of men, reflect the whole truth. There is so much of it; it is so very diverse; it requires such peculiarity of composition to make it known, that it requires one hundred men to surround God's attribute, and so, little by little, one part and another another, if there be no heart union these men are separate sects, and very soon become oppugnant sects. It is the way with the world—wherever you see a man that is not yourself, hit him. [Laughter.] There is no brotherhood in the world, however, we are united in heart, we come little by little to a knowledge of the truth—some more than others, some more precious parts—and in the substantial unity of the whole we get the divine truth, and not in the separate presentation of sects, classes or individuals or philosophical schools. It is the sum of all fructifying beliefs that represents Christianity, and not any single opinion of any individual. The Christianity of Jesus cannot be put in a book, and never was. The Bible contains no God, no Christ, but the symbolization of God, and of a Christ. He lives outside of all and of all earths and worlds. Living and vital every where, He cannot be compressed into Jerusalem, nor into the Temple, and still less within the leaves of a printed book. The book tells us of Him, but it is not Him. He is in the Church, and what is the Church? Not a building, not a simple population, but it is the heart vitalized by the Divine Spirit itself; the heart of men brought into the region of the Divine power. All these constitute the great Church of God on earth, and it is in the hearts of men that He only can be found. And in the great work which has been going on through many stages from the beginning until this day it seems to me that the providence of God, unless that we are dreaming near to that final fruition for which Christ prayed. We are to remember the platform laid down to the masses. In identifying our great Master, John sent to the Savior demanding, "Art thou the Christ, or look we for another?" Jesus said, Go and tell John I preach such and such doctrines, and I organized such a kindred." In that same hour He had been performing many wonderful works. "Go tell him," said He, "the blind see, the deaf hear, the dead are raised," and then the climax of all, "the poor have the Gospel preached unto them." Jesus says, "go tell him that;" and John has sense enough to know what that means. [A laugh.] What was then the substance of all this? The works that are done, they testify, and when, therefore, our Master said, "By his fruits ye shall know him," there was a test of orthodoxy; there was a test of Christian connection. He that does the will of God in the Spirit of the Lord, or seeks to do it in earnestness cannot be heterodox. It is in the court of the Gentile he is arraigned—not in his interior, where the heart is the temple. I do not underrate philosophical reasoning; they are better than nothing, but they are secondary and lower down in the plane. The life of a man is in his heart, and "by his fruits shall ye know him." He who lives in reverential obedience to God is living in true sympathy with the Divine power; he is Christ's; he is mine; he is yours. Calvin and everybody's. Fenelon and Bossuet are mine, though they may not be yours. Enough to know that I am theirs, but that is their mistake and not mine. [Laughter.] All men long for Heaven. No man loves the animal for ever, and seeking resurrection of the Spirit out of its animality is breaking up the divine light. Life being the resurrection kindled in him, no man is coming to these higher planes that is not my blood, and his my father's blood, in him then is Jesus Christ. Now, my brethren, let me inform you in a few words that I am myself the only soundly orthodox man in this congregation, [laughter,] and I also say with the utmost deference that there is but one form of popular church organization. [Continued laughter.] I do think that all the others are clumsy. I won't specify, yet I think the vehicles with which they are carrying passengers to Heaven are better than to be without them. I think there is work to be done in all denominations; for the Episcopal Church—God bless the Church of my mother; for the Presbyterian—God bless the Church of my early ministry; for the Methodists—God bless the brethren with whom I have gone through the wilderness and prayed in the camp-meetings of the West, and we desire the support of our brethren of the other Congregational Church, who are known by the name of Baptists, I believe, Sir, are they not? [Laughter.] Our reform churches, since they are reformed, I like them very much. I know of no denomination, however small their numbers, who could not be made powerful instruments for the fulfillment of God's purposes. It is not that they are specially organized, and it is not altogether this that each man thinks that his denomination is the best. It is not that does the mischief. It is that being separately and differently organized, they are trained to believe they are the only organization on which God looks with special favor. Forty men looking into the Scripture; each one drew a special idea, and I don't think God ever set up a mark for forty men to fire at and it could not be hit. Brethren, whatever organization tends to the advancement of the great ends of the Gospel, the brotherhood of Christ and the harmony of the Church, that is good enough for God's providence and it ought to be good enough for us. Therefore let us not be iconoclastic. I would not that any association that undertook to create a Christian union should excite prejudice and distrust. All I say is that while every man entertains his own opinions, let him in a spirit of love for the Lord promote fellowship with others as honest as himself. We don't want one symbol or name; we want one spirit. That we get by the spirit of love from the hands of God, and it answers every substantial use. I recognize the Presbyterians and Baptists as sincere Christians, and in my heart wish them well. I promote the work of God in their hearts; let them be true to their convictions, but let me be true to mine. There are people in Columbia-street who have not the taste in keeping their houses that I have, and I compassionate them. I get up every morning at 5 o'clock, and they can't get up until 8, which is a mortal heresy, but still I speak to them. [Laughter.] There are people who dine at the abominable hour of 6 in the evening, which I never do, and they know it, yet don't reform. Every one is not endowed as I am. [Laughter.] There is but one Pope, and I am he. And yet by this toleration I get along well with these people. I let their children play with mine when I had any and we are all harmonious, and we visit each other, and we rejoice in each other's prosperity, and we mourn in each other's sorrows. Now, why should not churches get along as well as houses? It is considered bad manners to interfere in a neighbor's economy; why not let churches have the same privileges? Once let men get this idea that conscience (applause) [laughter] of unity and co-operative harmony, and the work is substantially accomplished. I believe God is bringing us to that time. Twenty-five years ago who could bring this company of Christian ministers together for the purpose, and if you had you would not have laughed so much and been so happy. I don't believe there would be that same unity of sympathy and religious feeling which exists now. I think the twilight has come. We are in the dawn of the latter day of glory. There are many hard battles to be fought, but the twilight is in the East. The reverend gentleman, in conclusion, expressed his confidence in the approach of a period of unity among all churches, and, as a result, the establishment of substantial harmony, of love and sympathy. [Applause.]

REMARKS BY DR. CATHER AND OTHERS.

Rev. Dr. CATHER followed Mr. BEECHER. On opening he remarked that as there were more persons present then than had been at previous breakfasts, and many of them might not know what had been done already, a brief recapitulation would be necessary, which he thereupon presented. He believed, he said, that in united council, as in divided labor, there is the greatest wisdom and power, but the men who should undertake the work of this proposed association should be members of living evangelical churches. They must not believe that Christ is the head of any particular church to the exclusion of every other church, but while each is loyal to his own local organization, they must come together in this work from motives of pure loyalty to Christ, and stay together until conscience releases them. The facts of this science and upon which it is designed to be based, are the creation, the depravity of the human race, the divinity and atonement of Christ, and the work of the Holy Spirit upon human hearts. And on these facts it is designed by this association to build up a high school of morals which shall include the following sections: 1. The Source of Morals; 2. Spiritual Morals; 3. Intellectual Morals; 4. Social Economics; and 5. Industrial Morals. There are now twenty members in the Provisional Council in the United States, but one hundred are wanted before any other step can be taken. The members of this council pledge themselves to pay annually for the purposes of the association for three years, laymen $50, and clergymen $25. Members of the Association in the same relations pay: laymen $10 a year, and clergymen, $5. An enrollment book was passed around, in which those who were disposed to join wrote their names and addresses. Mr. BEECHER having a matrimonial knot to tie, at his house at 11½ A. M., withdrew at this point, and called Rev. Dr. BUDDINGTON to the chair.

The doctor, on assuming the direction of the meeting, made a brief address. He did not believe, he, said, in forcing Christian unity, but there is a unity which now waits at the altar, and only needs our help to come forth clothed in the spirit and power of Christian unity. Christ means us to become, and he believed the time had come, but nothing should be done hastily nor any step be taken until the Spirit of Christ within us doth signify it. Christ has designed that his work shall be carried forward by the methods adopted by his Church, and he was ready to take any steps performed for Christ. It is not possible for us, he asked, to realize all that unity prayed for by the Savior in the chapter read and for which the nations are panting, when we engage in unity of work? The Philistines are upon us from all quarters, and who knows but that God may have left these enemies to press upon our flanks to bring us into closer union of action and to release our people from social and moral errors. And when a distinct object is set forth, we shall find unity of work and co-operation of workmen in it.

Rev. Dr. DURYEA, in moving the following resolution for adoption, saw in the analogy of the life of the body and of the mind a unity and a diversity of action and of sympathy similar to that manifested by the Church of Christ. The members may not cognize each other in their activities, but they are certain to do so in suffering. The Doctor further illustrated this idea of Christian unity as acknowledged in some form or other by every denomination of Christians. He said that he had had an audience with the Pope, in which that ecclesiastical prelate had acknowledged his sonship, by remarking that though he (DURYEA) was a Protestant, yet inasmuch as he (the Pope) had been baptized in the name of the blessed Trinity, he belonged to the "Holy Father" who gave him his blessing. And you may imagine, said the Doctor, with what interest I watched the deliberations of the Ecumenical Council, and the results to which it should come, even as a child watches the drafting of a will by his father. [Laughter.] The cavils against Christianity, as divided, and its contrast with Roman unity, should be met with such an exhibition of Christian unity as shall make it acceptable and acknowled by Romanists and by infidelity. Can we make such an exhibition? He regretted that there are men in the Christian Church who are all the while asserting the contrary. What we want is such a respectable show of unity as shall carry conviction to every mind—Romanist and unbeliever. The resolution was then adopted, as follows:

Resolved, That we heartily rejoice at the effort now being made to give expression to the great ideas of the visible Catholic Church of Christ, consisting as it does of the sum of all true—i. e., evangelical particular churches.

Rev. Dr. OSBORN said that one touch of nature makes the whole world kind, and so also does one touch of Christ make the whole Church kin. And while he held firm to Calvinistic doctrines, he did not deny to others the right to hold different ideas. He heartily moved the adoption of the following:

Resolved, That we hail with special pleasure the formation of the International Christian Moral Science Association, because it gives the recognition on the part of all its members of their fellow-Catholic Church membership in the growth of their principles, and because it affords a further competence to differ in these details which are consistent therewith. Adopted.

Rev. Dr. RIDGAWAY then offered a few remarks, concluding with a resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That we regard with deep interest and satisfaction the proposed work of this Association, viz., the creation and application of a science of Christian morals, as being in harmony with the promises or systematic beneficence, which is only possible to the combined wisdom and experience of the whole church, and which is likely, under God, to augment the power of evangelical Christianity in a degree never before witnessed.

Remarks were also made by Rev. Mr. PENTECOST, Dr. CONANT and Dr. MUNCKEN, and the annexed resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we learn with sincere gratification the progress which has been made toward the rapid completion of the Council, and hope that it may be the full number desired, viz., 140, will without delay be enrolled, and that we recommend the distribution of a large edition of the prize essays, "Sources and the Science of Morals," and that the Council proceed to the immediate enrollment of the members at the Association itself, and to the holding of the first annual Moral Science Congress in the United States.

Rev. GEO. L. TAYLOR then moved votes of thanks to the presiding officers and to Dr. CATHER. The resolution was seconded by Rev. THOS. C. OLIVER (colored) in a very humorous speech, which kept the ministers in a roar all the time, while he related familiar anecdotes of plantation life to illustrate the point that it was would only "spit out" their prejudices they would then easily recognize the universal brotherhood of man and the universal fatherhood of God. The ice was reached when he declared that his own prejudice was gone, and in the midst of the storm of laughter that followed he took his seat.

Mr. TAYLOR then moved that as soon as the Provisional Council is ready, it shall call a meeting in the interest of this Association, at which Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER shall be requested to preside. Carried. The meeting after the Doxology had been sung and the Benediction pronounced by Dr. CONANT, adjourned.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Plans and Action as to the Public Institutions—Publication of Births and Marriages to Cease—Laws as to Vital Statistics to be Enforced.

The Board of Health met, yesterday, at the usual hour, President BOSWORTH in the chair, and Commissioners Barr, Carnochan, Obcardt, Gross, Manierre, Mullaly, S. Smith and H. Smith, present.

Upon report of the Attorney it was ordered that suits be commenced in thirty-eight cases of violations of the Tenement-house law, twenty-five cases of non-compliance with the orders of the Board.

An order was presented from the Attorney's office by Mr. HASTINGS, embodying the requirements of the Board for the improvement of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, which have been heretofore published. The order having been read, it appeared that several gentlemen were present as a committee from the directors of the Asylum, and upon invitation Mr. STRONG addressed the Board. He said that the directors had not been sluggards, nor did they need to be legally waked of their duty to care for the sanitary condition of the buildings and unfortunates in their charge. They had been greatly incommoded by their inability to procure a sufficient supply of Croton water, as they were permitted to lay only a one-inch pipe to the aqueduct, and they have made zealous efforts to obtain a sufficient supply. When the institution was opened for the present year the premises were in a perfect Sanitary condition, but soon afterward a boy from Wayne County, who brought the disease with him, developed typhoid fever, and it was thus communicated to others, until there had been a total of fifty-nine cases and seven deaths. From the moment the disease appeared as an epidemic, an adjacent unoccupied building was procured for a hospital, and every case moved thither as soon as developed. The school was also dismissed, and the teachers assumed the duties of nurses of the sick, with such assiduity that one lady has fallen a victim to the disease. Mr. STRONG contended that the directors had throughout done all their duty, and had already all the improvements ordered by the Board in progress.

Mr. ELISHUA BROOKS also addressed the Board in behalf of the directors, saying he had been one of them for the past fifteen years, and had always taken a great interest in it, as the leading institution of its kind in the world. He objected to the order of the Board, as presenting the directors to the public as delinquents in a matter in which they had been blameless, and they therefore asked that the entering of the order be postponed for the present, as the directors have done, or are doing, all that it requires, and they desire that all they do may be approved by the Engineer of the Board. Upon the consolidation of the remains of Mr. BROOKS the further consideration of the order was postponed, and the matter was referred to the Engineer and City Sanitary Inspector.

A communication was read from Dr. D. TILDEN BROWN, of the Bloomingdale Asylum, referring to the account of the condition of the institution in the NEW-YORK TIMES, and claiming that whatever may have been the conclusions of the Sanitary Committee, there was no institution in better condition. It was, however, true that the sewerage beyond the grounds of the institution was very defective, but that was entirely beyond the control of the Governors, who had long been anxious to have this matter remedied. He observed presented requiring a nine-inch pipe to be laid to connect with the sewer at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street and Tenth-avenue, but as it was explained that to carry out the order would require a public street to be entered upon, the subject was referred to the Department of Public Works.

An order was entered requiring the New-York Orphan Asylum to construct a sub-drain and two vaults, 300 feet distant from the main building, and to have them properly inclosed with tight walls.

The Committee on Vital Statistics reported a resolution that, in accordance with section 28, chapter 14, of the laws of 1866, information of the records of births be refused for publication, and that the publication of records of marriages be permitted only in the discretion of the Registrar of Records. The resolution was adopted unanimously, and without debate.

The Committee on Law and Ordinances presented a preamble and resolution, naming the various laws to that end, and declaring that hereafter the Board will vigorously enforce all laws requiring registration of births, marriages and deaths. A discussion ensued as to the means to be adopted to secure perfect vital statistics, but it was finally referred back to the committee to prepare a circular embracing the various provisions of law for distribution to the parties interested.

The report of Dr. MOSES, City Sanitary Inspector shows the following comparative statement of contagious diseases reported to the Bureau for the week ending Dec. 10, 1870, and a Week ending Dec. 5.—Typhus fever, 5; typhoid fever, 45; relapsing fever, 7; small-pox, 2; scarlatina, 61; measles, 48; diphtheria, 7. Week ending Dec. 10.—Typhus fever, 1; typhoid fever, 21; relapsing fever, 1; small-pox, 2; scarlatina, 79; measles, 60; diphtheria, 8.

After the transaction of a large amount of routine business the Board adjourned until Wednesday next.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The only transaction effected at the Exchange, yesterday, (Dec. 14,) was made by ROBERTS & McGUIRE, who, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of ANDREW J. SMITH, Esq., referee, disposed of the premises known as No. 446 Broome-street. The property comprises a three-story and basement brick house and lot, 25.3x80, and was sold to S. J. LEVY for $65,100—a price considerably larger than it was expected the premises would bring. Although located near Broadway, and desirable as a business stand, the lot is a very small one, while the building is not a modern structure, and in depth not covering the lot. When these facts are considered, the result of the transaction, it will be seen, was most successful, and a very gratifying one to Col. ROBERTS, the auctioneer conducting the sale.

The only other business transacted at the Exchange, yesterday, was the adjournment of the following sales by JAMES M. HALLEY: Nos. 101 to 105 Wooster-street, 100 feet 6 inches west of Third-avenue, adjourned to Jan. 5, 1871; house and lot on the south side of Walker-street, 166 feet of West Broadway, premises known as No. 18, adjourned to Jan. 10, 1871. Both the above are Supreme Court sales in foreclosure, under the direction of THOMAS H. LAUDER, referee.

On Saturday, at Hackensack, N. J., at 2 P. M., at the Court-house in that place, a handsomely-located country residence is advertised to be sold at Sheriff's sale. The property comprises a stone house, together with over five acres of ornamental grounds. The property is the residence of Mr. P. E. ROBERT, and is situated within the village limits. The proximity to the City is a great point in its favor, and the premises will probably bring a good price.

During the present week and until after the holidays there is but little prospect for any particular activity in real estate, but those conversant with the business predict that after Jan. 1, 1871, the market will present an improved tone. As to whether values will then advance is a mooted question, but no serious decline in prices is anticipated, although a strong effort is being made in certain quarters to bring about such a result. Holders of property express great confidence in their ability to weather any storm that may arise, and unless forced by circumstances to sell out, is is not probable that lower figures will rule. Larger fortunes have been made in the rise than in the fall of New-York lots, and as the City increases in population, the value of the unoccupied and intrinsic values of property appreciate. This being so, as has always been the case in other large cities as well as our own, time has proved that existing prices, even in seasons of speculative excitement, are no criterion as to future values. Lots in New-York are no shining investment, and home-file owners can afford to wait patiently, feeling morally certain that they will reap a profit in the end.

By an act of the General Assembly of the State of Georgia, approved Oct. 24, 1870, authority is given to the Governor to lease the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the property of the State, together with all of its houses, workshops, depots, rolling stock and appurtenances of every character, for the term of twenty years, upon certain terms, and subject to certain restrictions as more fully set forth in the act.

The monthly rental shall not be less than twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000), payable monthly. The lessees shall give a bond for a term of eight years, in the sum of two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000), to secure the monthly payment of the amount of rental agreed upon, and for the return of the road and its appurtenances at the expiration of the lease, or on any termination or forfeiture thereof, in as good condition as at the time of leasing, five millions ($5,000,000) of which security shall be within this State, and the balance, if out of the State, shall be upon unexceptionable security, and shall be assessed to be worth over and above their indebtedness, at least five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000.)

The lessees shall not be less than any men number, a majority of whom shall be citizens of the State, and the residents of this State, and shall represent a majority of the whole interest in the lease. No railroad or express company, or any combination of them, shall, in any manner, own or control, directly or indirectly, any interest in the lease, but they may become subscribers on the bonds of the lessees. The lessees shall not charge a higher rate for local freights over said road than the average rate charged by the Georgia Railroad and Banking Company, and the Macon and Western Railroad Company, for likeness freights over their roads, and the said companies shall have the same rights, immunities, privileges, immunities and exemptions, among the stockholders of banks, and shall be liable to the same liabilities, disabilities, and pay the business of said railroad companies, and the property of the State is pledged to redeem all mortgage bonds and coupons now resting on the Standard, as they fall due, and to save the harmless therefrom all under the lease.

The proposals must state in full the names and residence of the parties making the same, and if a company, the names of the officers thereof, and if a company, the names of the officers thereof, and if a company, the names of the officers thereof

POLITICAL.

CONGRESSIONAL CAUCUS

Second Session of the Republican Representatives in Congress—Further Debate on Political Disabilities—No Conclusion—Adjourned Sine Die.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—A second session of the caucus of Republican members of the House of Representatives was held in the Capitol tonight. Gen. BANKS called the meeting to order.

Mr. DEJARNETTE, of Texas, was the first speaker. He modified his previous remarks in regard to the Sehurz movement in Missouri by declaring that he only meant to say that what had happened in that State might happen in other States, if political disabilities were not removed.

Mr. KELSEY, of New-York, declared as an uncompromising hostility to any further removal of political disabilities.

Mr. COBB, of North Carolina, alluded to the fact that there were three classes in the Republican Party on the subject of political disabilities, and urged that such a compromise should be prepared as all could agree upon.

Mr. SHERIDAN, of Louisiana, spoke in favor of general amnesty, and declared that he would vote for any proposition which granted it. The reason why the Republicans recently succeeded in carrying the election in that State was that they had previously declared themselves in favor of removing all political disabilities, and the people by a vote almost unanimous struck from the State Constitution the provisions which imposed them on its citizens.

Mr. BUTLER, of Tennessee, declared the feeling and spirit of the South did not justify general amnesty; that the mild treatment by the Republican Party of the rebel party was a mistake, and the end would prove a failure. The Republicans would regret it; pandering to rebel sentiment was a blunder.

Mr. BUCKLEY, of Alabama, said the only course now was to proclaim a general amnesty; that there was less danger from Ex-Gov. VANCE than from men who had never been in the rebellion.

Messrs. MAYNARD and TILLMAN expressed views similar to those uttered by them last night.

Mr. MOSBY, of Louisiana, declared himself in favor of a general amnesty, and alleged as the reason why the Republicans in the North opposed the removal of disabilities was of their ignorance of the operation of the third section of the Fourteenth Amendment in the South. If this had long ago been repealed, some of the best men in the South now acting with the Democratic Party, would be Republicans. The sympathies of many of these were with the Republican Party; but they acted with the Democrats in hope the latter would the more speedily and certainly aid in the removal of political disabilities. The Southern Republicans knew what best they wanted.

Mr. PORTER, of Virginia, declared against any further amnesty, and spoke at some length of the state of feeling in Virginia, saying that the conservatives in that State had ignored the Fifteenth Amendment and attempted to prevent colored men from voting.

Mr. STEVENSON, of Ohio, had a resolution proposing to adjourn the amnesty question until after the holidays. He showed this to various members, and there seemed to be a disposition on the part of some of them to vote for it, but the resolution was not offered.

The discussion was continued two hours and a half. A number of the members had left the hall, and it being evident that no conclusion could be arrived at, the caucus adjourned sine die. There were at no time during the evening more than fifty members present. Gen. BUTLER was among the absentees.

THE UNION LEAGUE

Meeting of the National Council—Election of Officers—A New Code of Principles.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 14.—The National Council of the Union League of America met in annual session in this city today. The delegates, of whom there were a large number in attendance, were from fifteen different States. At 12 M. Gov. GEARY, of Pennsylvania, called the Council to order, and in a brief speech gave the delegates a hearty welcome to Philadelphia. After disposing of some routine business, the following officers for the National Council were elected:

President—Hon. J. W. GEARY, Pennsylvania.
Vice-Presidents—C. W. Goddard, New-York; E. A. Sandwell, Florida.
Recording Secretary—Thomas G. Baker, New-York.
Corresponding Secretary—S. F. Gunner.
Treasurer—William V. Alexander, New-York.
Marshal—Prof. William Howard Day, Maryland.
Sergeant-at-Arms—Samuel Smith, New-York.
Chaplain—R. C. Moss, Maryland.
Executive Committee—Messrs. Alabama; ——, Arkansas; J. L. Hodges, California; A. Barstow, Connecticut; M. Jewell, Maryland; Hon. J. P. Asper, Missouri; Hon. Mr. Rainey, South Carolina; C. C. Pinckney, New-York; Sinclair Tousey, New-York.

Several important resolutions were adopted, one of which was, that the Councils shall refrain from making any political nomination, and shall follow out the object of the Union League, which is to carry out the nominations made by the Union Republican Party. A new code of principles was adopted, one section of which calls upon the Union League to sustain free schools, and to discourage the appropriation of the public funds for sectarian purposes. Eloquent addresses were made by Gov. GEARY, of Pennsylvania; William C. Newell, of New-Jersey; Prof. W. Howard Day, of Maryland; J. H. Bayse, of Virginia; Gen. J. S. Negley, of Pennsylvania; C. W. Goddard, of New-York, and others. The Union League Club of this city formally received the National Council at the rooms of the former body on Broad-street at 6 o'clock this evening, and short and pleasant speeches were made by various members.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Withdrawal of Senator Cattell.

The following is the letter of Senator CATTELL, of New-Jersey, declining to be a candidate for re-election, the points of which have already appeared in the TIMES:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9, 1870.

MY DEAR SENATOR: You are aware that, yielding to the solicitation of my friends throughout the State, I allowed the use of my name as a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate. I did this, confidently believing my health was so entirely restored that I would certainly be able to assume and discharge all the responsibilities and duties of that position. But since my return to Washington, a slight relapse from what seemed established health has constrained me to doubt whether I can venture to attempt this, with entire justice to the Republican Party of New-Jersey, or with perfect safety to myself. I am unwilling, therefore, however gratifying it would be to receive their evidence of the continued confidence of my political friends, to permit them to assume the risk of such a state of health on my part, as might, even temporarily, incapacitate me from the discharge of my duties as their representative. Thus constrained, I have felt bound to state these facts frankly to you, as soon as they were assured to myself, and to request you to make known to my friends and to the party that, full of gratitude for their support and confidence hitherto, I must now, in justice to them and to myself, withdraw my name as a candidate for re-election.

Hoping soon to be able to contribute in a private capacity to the advancement and best interests of the Republican Party, whose principles I hold dear, believe me very truly your sincere friend, ALEX. G. CATTELL.

Hon. EDWARD BETTLE, Senator from Camden County.

LOCAL POLITICS.

Another Declaration From the Tammany Republicans.

The Tammany Republicans of the Eleventh Assembly District met last evening at the head-quarters, corner Fifth-avenue and Twenty-second-street, Mr. JOHN G. GEDDES presiding. The time was almost wholly devoted to the passage of anti-Administration resolutions, of which the following are fair samples:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed for the purpose of purging the roll of the names of all persons who, after proper investigation, shall be found to have voted against the regular Republican candidate for member of Assembly at the last State election; also giving said committee power to give notice to parties who may be so charged, to appear and defend themselves from the charges preferred against them.

After much debate pro and con. by Messrs. CONOVER and HASTE, the former preferring the more open course of condemning before the association in regular session, Messrs. JAMES I. HAGEN, GEORGE VAN NORT, D. D. CONOVER, F. VAN SLAGEN and F. FITZSIMMONS were appointed such committee.

Mr. VAN HAGEN presented a resolution, to the effect that the Association take action, and employ counsel to prosecute the Deputy Sheriffs, and those in Federal office in this City believed to be implicated, in the unlawful arrest of Mr. GILMORE, an inspector in the Nineteenth Election District of the Twentieth Ward, on the 8th of November last, and his confinement in Ludlow-street Jail until a o'clock next day, it was referred to the General Committee, with the request that immediate action be taken upon it.

Third Assembly District Grant Club.

The old members of the Third Assembly Grant Club met last evening at their head-quarters, No. 375 Broome-street, and re-elected ADOLPHUS BORST as President, and the following gentlemen as permanent officers: F. D. CURTISS, GEORGE W. GLMSTEAD, Vice-Presidents; ROBERT MCMANUS, THOS. F. GRADY, Secretaries; JACOB SOUR, Treasurer. They have rented their head-quarters until after the Presidential election, and have passed resolutions in support of Gen. GRANT for renomination, and they will hold monthly meetings the first Thursday of every month.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Boston will have eight Republicans and four Democrats in its new Board of Aldermen.

Lynn, Mass., demands attention. It elected six women on its School Committee on Monday.

Ex-Gov. COLLFAX and Gen. LOGAN are the leading candidates in Illinois for the Senate.

The Cincinnati Enquirer is again complaining that New-England has the chairmanship of too many Senate Committees.

The Charleston (S. C.) Courier urges the removal of all political disabilities from participants in the rebellion, on the ground that such a course will best promote the common interests of our reunited country.

"Republican economy and retrenchment serve well in Pennsylvania, as is shown by the announcement by Gov. GEARY, that during the year ending Nov. 30, 1870, $1,002,231 of State bonds have been canceled.

The revival of the Usury laws is advocated by a few papers in South Carolina, which think they would be to the advantage of the planters, but the proposition does not meet much favor, apparently.

The Columbus (Ohio) State Journal calls for an immediate resumption of specie payments, and says Congress can in a thousand ways aid in giving soundness and stability to the currency, which is simply the creature of its own power.

The Chicago Journal makes bold to say that State and party considerations unite in making it the bounden duty of the Legislature of Illinois to ignore the owlish counsels of those who would have a premium put upon indolence and mediocrity.

Canada is assured by the Ogdensburg Journal that it must abandon its restrictive rules and regulations relating to the fisheries, or our Government will take steps to vindicate its rights and to defend its citizens in the exercise of theirs.

The rights of our fishermen will be protected, says the Auburn Advertiser, "peacefully if we may, forcibly if we must. If peacefully," it continues, "Canada may still draw sustenance from the States; if forcibly, then she must care for herself. As her choice is, so shall her fate be."

Ex-Senator CHARLES E. STUART, of Michigan, who was not before much heard from since the Philadelphia Convention, in 1866, has written a letter contending that it is utterly preposterous to suppose the election of Judge SUTHERLAND to Congress is rendered invalid by any provision of the State Constitution.

Yet once more does the Richmond Enquirer insist that Virginia politicians must have a voice in the Democratic Party of the country. It expresses the belief that, if Virginian intellect and Virginian purpose can have its proper influence over that organization, the party certainly will not be inferior to what it is, and it may be improved.

The cry that we ought to have more business men in Congress, merely as such, is not echoed by the Detroit Post, that paper insisting that it is much more important that we should send intelligent, industrious men of common sense, than that we should make a specialty of any one class, or elect those of any peculiar eminence.

Yesterday's mails brought California expressions of opinion on the President's Message. The San Francisco Alta gives the general verdict of the Republican Press when it says that on the whole it may very justly be called an able paper, presenting the usual review clearly and methodically, and opening new questions with much vigor and boldness.

Senator WILSON'S Anti-forcible-assessments bill is approved by the Boston Advertiser, but it thinks that a little common sense and a little flexibility of temper would be better than any law, and that the more certain way would be for the political committees to make their rules right in the first place, and then employ men who have the judgment to enforce them with decency and discretion.

The following gentlemen have been named in connection with the Republican nomination for Governor of Iowa: Judge Baldwin, Gen. G. M. Dodge, John A. Elliott, C. C. Carpenter, Edward Wright, Hiram Price, S. F. Gue, G. W. Slagle, M. V. Burdick, J. B. Grinnell, John Scott, Henry O'Connor, and H. G. Angle. Other names will be published as soon as we can find room.

The anticipated election of Hon. JOHN S. PHELPS, of Missouri, to the Senate, as successor of Senator DRAKE, is hailed with pleasure by the New-Haven Journal, he being a native of Connecticut, and having in his career done honor to the State. He was a member of Congress for sixteen years previous to the war, and served as Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means.

The appointment of Gen. SCHENCK as Minister to England is approved by the Worcester (Mass.) Spy, which describes him as a genuine American, endowed with a clear head, a strong will, an abundance of common sense, and a sufficient amount of rugged manhood, who can not possibly become one of the soft, catlike diplomatists, nor be bewildered by the arts of such men.

The Pittsburg Gazette thinks it is time that certain Republican journals should cease their spiteful war upon members of the party, and says that it has grown tired of these efforts to rob the Republican Party of its strength by injudicious and unwise attacks on every act of the Administration that such journals in their wisdom think connected with some prominent Republican whom they fear and hate.

The contest for United States Senator, in Illinois, according to the Chicago Times, is "hexahedral," also "hexandrian;" but unhappily, the arrangement is "not that of a hexagon, nor of any other, saving the common one, called harmony." By this, the Times wishes to let its readers know that, in its belief, there are six candidates for the position, and that the contest for the seat is being vigorously conducted.

The leading Democratic paper in Missouri, the St. Louis Republican, has discovered that the contest in the Republican Party—that "between the old and new dispensation"—is to be fought out within the family, the new-party movement having been abandoned, for the present. But it thinks it will end in the failure of the "insurgents," who will ultimately withdraw from a party which they cannot control and will not subdilt to.

It is said the Democrats of the First District of New-Hampshire will again run Hon. E. A. HIBARD, of Lancaster, for Congress. He is a strong candidate. Ex-Mayor FRANK JONES, of Portsmouth, and JOHN S. H. FRENCH, whom the Democrats and many Republicans wished to be appointed Judge of the Supreme Judicial Court last Summer, are also named. Many of Mr. JONES' party friends, however, wish him to be put in nomination for Governor.

THE MURDER OF O'BRIEN.

Trial of Lawrence Sullivan for Killing John O'Brien—Testimony for the Prosecution.

The commencement of another murder trial was witnessed in the Court of General Session yesterday, before Judge BEDFORD. The prisoner, LAWRENCE SULLIVAN, was charged with having killed JOHN O'BRIEN, at No. 1 Whitehall-street, on the 1st of June last. The evidence all pointed to the conclusion that the deceased was killed because he interfered at a quarrel between the accused and his wife. Dr. CORNELL testified that death was primarily caused by a stab in the abdomen.

JOHN O'CONNOR, testified: I reside at No. 19 Pearl-street; am the lessee of No. 1 Whitehall-street; was passing there about six o'clock in the evening of June 1, and was called by a woman to make peace between the prisoner and his wife; went upstairs to the second floor, where SULLIVAN'S wife and mother-in-law had a bedroom; they were quiet then; SULLIVAN'S wife said: "See how we are treated by this murdering thief who killed my brother and wants to kill me now;" witness asked SULLIVAN to go out with him; they were going out together when SULLIVAN'S mother-in-law met them at the door, and struck him twice or three times on the head with a piece of wood; SULLIVAN struck her back with a parasol; witness then ran up the stairs to where O'BRIEN was sitting; O'BRIEN was sitting on the stairs a few steps above the floor on which SULLIVAN'S wife lived; SULLIVAN rushed up, opening a pocket-knife which he had in his hand; he said to O'BRIEN, your name is O'BRIEN; O'BRIEN said yes, then said SULLIVAN, "you are THIEF! you are anything," (with an oath,) and he stabbed him three times; O'BRIEN

JULIA BUCKLY, JOHN HOGAN and Mrs. KERNEY were called as witnesses for the prosecution.

Mrs. JOHN O'CONNOR, a sister of the deceased, lived in the building; knew of the difficulty between SULLIVAN and his wife; her brother had been to dinner on the evening in question; he was looking on as the trouble; when she heard him say, "I didn't do anything;" she rushed out of her apartment and ran to where her brother lay; he said, "MARY MARY! I'm stabbed—I'm stabbed;" she caught SULLIVAN by the collar, and said she would have him arrested; he wanted to break away from her; he had something in one hand, which he changed to the other; when changing it witness saw it was a knife; in trying to break away from her he pulled her down some steps on the stairway; then finding she would not let go, he drew back the hand with the knife in it, and swore some oath he would stab or kill her if she did not let go; at the same time he shook her off, ran down stairs, and jumping off the stoop, ran off.

The trial was adjourned until today.

It appears that Mr. WIESNER had deposited $8,000 in the East-River National Bank, drawn by M. D. WARD in favor of F. R. BAILEY, of Bloomingdale, N. J., was deposited in Station D of the Post-office, and never received by the latter. On the 26th ult. MARSHALL called on the present complainant, and making a purchase of 75c., received the balance due on the lost check; the indorsement he had forged, as in the case of Mr. LELAND'S $12,000 check. MARSHALL was held for trial on this new charge. How the prisoner obtained the two letters is unexplained.

BROOKLYN.

Despite the fact that Brooklyn pays $22 per week for the support of every patient in her hospitals, complaints are being made almost daily by the unfortunates who are compelled to go to these places for treatment, that the behavior of those in charge of them is of the most inhuman character. No later than yesterday a poor fellow named ROBERT BOONEKIN, residing at No. 134 Gold-street, appeared at the reporters' head-quarters and complained of most abusive treatment sustained at the hospitals in Flatbush.

LONG ISLAND.

A subscription paper is being circulated in Flushing for the purpose of raising a sufficient sum to present as a testimonial to Mr. J. SOPER, the engineer of the train on the Flushing and North-side Railroad which ran into an open draw-bridge Tuesday night. It seems that after the engineer applied the wheel brakes, he blew the whistle for "down brakes" actually while the locomotive was falling into the creek. If the engineer had not stared manfully by his engine, and reversed his own life thereby, there is no doubt but a large number of lives would have been sacrificed.

The city financial difficulties again came up in the Jersey City Board of Aldermen last evening. Alderman CLARK announced that $100,000 worth of the city bonds were due on Monday, and that unless the city could pay off the obligation the matter would go to protest.
